

QUEST

By FRANK COLAPINTO

L. Van Beethoven, Op. 35, Seven Bagatelles for Pianoforte. Schirmer's Library of Musical Classics, Vol. 970. G. Schirmer, Inc., New York.

Of the 76 measures composing this Bagatelle in F Major, 65 are wrong. Comparison of this edition shows with that produced by Paul Bekker, Beethoven Bagatellen, Musikalische Stundenbücher, München, Dreimaßen Verlag, 1920. Many accounts have been replaced with feminine staccato: the editor of this version was doubtless a man who wore lace, and preserved with a parasol his dainty skin from the sun.

Let no teacher here or anywhere henceforth use this fake. Let no school here or anywhere in the world indulge this lie. Beethoven fought in vain if hecks prevail. Democracy is no stronger than a single wrong measure of Beethoven.

New Wine, with Ilona Massey, Alan Curtis, Billy Gilbert, Albert Basserman and Blinnie Barnes, music of Franz Schubert; produced by William Sekely; directed by Reinhold Schunzel. At the Little.

The only thing genuine in this film is the music of Franz Schubert. Here is brazen capitalization of the beauty of an honest soul to make dishonest money. Will the producers state motive, and cite authorities for making Schubert a draft dodger? This film is as opportunist and cheap in its avowals as Schubert was principled and rare in his values.

It is as fat in its settings and clothes as Schubert was lean in privilege and purse. Its dramatic purpose is as shifty as the inner stability of Schubert was fixt. For the sincerity of Schubert it substitutes insincerity; for his passion, sentimentality, and for his tragedy, the trappings of vulgar farce. "New Wine" exploits an immortal who never sought to sell himself save on poetic virtue. If "New Wine" has any virtue, it is in the consistency of its lying about an artist who always felt and wrote the truth.

Item: "There is little or nothing to be remembered written on the subject of getting an honest living. Neither the New Testament nor Poor Richard speaks to our condition. I cannot think of a single page which entertains, much less answers, the questions which I put to myself on this subject. How to make the getting of our living poetic for if it is not poetic, it is not life but death that we get. Is it that men are too disgusted with their experience, to speak of it? or that commonly they do not question the common mores? The most practically important of all questions, it seems to me, is how shall I get my living, and yet I find little or nothing said to the purpose in any book. Those who are living or the interest of money inherited, or dishonestly, i. e., by false methods, acquired, are of course incompetent to answer it. I consider that society with all its arts has done nothing for us in this respect. One would think, from looking at literature, that this question had never disturbed a solitary individual's musings. Cold and hunger seem more friendly to my nature than those methods, which men have adopted and advise to ward them off. If it were not that I desire to do something here—accomplish some work—I should certainly prefer to suffer and die rather than get a living by the modes men propose." Thoreau.

BISHOP HOWARD DEDICATES NEW LATIN SCHOOL BUILDING

COVINGTON, Ky. — The Most Rev. Francis W. Howard, Bishop of Covington, officiated at the blessing of the Covington Latin School at dedication ceremonies held here. The services began in St. Mary's Cathedral, where the dedicatory sermon was delivered by the Rev. Leo J. Streck, Diocesan Superintendent of Schools. A procession to the school building followed.

In a letter to the clergy announcing the ceremony, His Excellency had asked all who could to attend "as an encouragement to the teachers of the school, the students and their parents, and a token of appreciation to all who have made the sacrifices on which the work is founded."

Constructed of brick and stone the school is modern in all respects.
