QUEST

By FRANK COLAPINTO

At both concerts last week there were encores..

Encores are the final brush strokes that make evenings of music perfect in form, integrated in content, veritable paintings of reverence, the supreme value of art.

Only Toscanini and the like shun encores.

Only the Boston Symphony and the like shun encores.

But vaudeville and burlesque house encores.

Let there be encores.

Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, Jose Iturbi, conducting; with Argentinita, Pilar Lopez, Federico Rey, dancers, and Carlos Montoya, guitarist: Thursday evening, Jan. 15, 1942; at Eastman Theatre under auspices Rochester Civic Music Association. Program:

J. Rodrigo, "Villancico," I. Albeniz, "Española," danced by Pilar Lopez and Federico Rey; Albeniz, "Triana," danced by Argentinita; E. E. Chevarri, "Motival," T. Breton, Mazurka from "La Verbena de la Paloma," Argentinita; E. Granados, "Spanish Dance;" L. Navarro, "Castilian Dance," Argentinita, Lopez, Rey; Rimsky-Korsakov, "Capriccio Espagnol," all dancers; three Lopez dances with guitar, "Farruca," Lopez, "Zambra," Argentinita, "Bulerias," all dancers; San Juan, "Llanto de Nevra," suite; "El Huayno," Peruvian ritual dance of Incas, orchestral arrangement by F. Reinisch, Argentinita and Lopez; Ravel, "Bolero," all dancers.

Here is a program of beauty and wonder given with precision, brilliance and grace. Argentinita and Iturbi are patrician interpreters of Iberian values. More than radiance and rhapsody, loneliness and sorrow mark the music of Spain. In Spain, said Cervantes, the newborn babe comes dancing forth from the womb. But the babe grew to weep.

Argentinita is a true Spanish dancer symbolizing matriarchal power, fertility and fulfillment. She dances with a ritualistic intensity that even in moments of ecstasy preserves the core of dignity. The slow movements of her dancing, the walking phrases, have the languor of Andalusian nights heavy with jasmines amid palms.

She can with castenets be incisive and savage as minor seconds, vehement as accented off beats. She can be piquant. She can evoke the essence of the Spanish dance and so of the Spanish soul. Her partner, Pilar Lopez, is a personality expressive of the caressing rhythms, the supple and insinuating themes of the Bulerias. In the dancing of diminutive Federico Rey the cross rhythms and unexpected changes characteristic of Sevillian music are exact and clear.

The string music of Rodrigo, an exile from the Hitler New Order, is beautiful with intimate lyricism. How Iturbi must rejoice in the friendship of Chavarri, whose "Festival" has the light of the evening field in it!

This program is provocative. Iturbi could have done better than play the Capriccio Espagnol of Rimsky Korsakov and the Bolero of Ravel. These are familiar items, neither of which deeply sounds the Spanish soul. Rimsky Korsakov himself said his work was external. The Bolero has little in common with the Spanish dance of that name, although its unitonal intensity and rhythmic persistence are Spanish traits. Iturbi might have done the Espana of Chabrier, the Iberia of Debussy. Dear Iturbi, please do the second movement of the Debussy String Quartet, which Falla said was "one of the finest Andalusian dances ever written," and let Argentinita dance. Please do the Spanish Rhapsody of Ravel. These works give Spain.

So do the dresses of Argentinita and Lopez give Spain, those voluminous and unrevealing dresses that preserve invisolate the mystery of woman. Their colors are Goyaesque, and recall the Madrid of bullfighters and blind beggars, of cradle virtuosi and composers lofty as the Pyrenees.

Budapest String Quartet, Josef Roismann, first violin; Alexander Schneider, second violin; Boris Kroyt, viola; Mischa Schneider, violoncello. Tuesday evening, Jan. 13, 1942. Kilbourn Hall Program:

Haydn, Quartet in D minor, Opus 76, No. 2; Ravel, Quartet in F major; Beethoven, Quartet in E flat major, Opus 74.

Ravel rests easily with Haydn and Beethoven. In the andante of the Haydn quartet beautiful the way andantes of Schubert and Beethoven are beautiful? Ravel, nevertheless, has written music of similar potency. Master, of the miniature, here in this brief song Ravel exquisitely confesses his soul. I have seen the sharp contours and highlights of Aroostook summers. I find the same clarity and infinite precision in this music. A great and gracious nature takes you into his heart.

The Budapest String Quartet played as expected, with dynamic precision and sensitive phrasing.

JUST, CHARITABLE PEACE IMPOSSIBLE IF AXIS WINS

RENO, Nev. — (NC) — An Axis victory will make considerations of charity and justice at the peace tables impossible, the Most Rev. Thomas K. Gorman, Bishop of Reno, declared here over Station KOH.

The Bishop urged Nevada Catholics to maintain the Catholic tradition of bravery, coolness, and willingness to make sacrifices in times of crisis.

Eastman School Little Symphony of Phi Mu Alpha, Frederick Fennell, Conductor: Monday evening, Jan. 19, 1942: Kilbourn Hall. Program:

Mozart, Overture, "The Abduction from the Seraglio;" Purcell, Lament for Dido from Dido and Aeneas, arranged by Bernard Rogers; Haydn, Symphony No. 102 in B flat major; Cadman, American Suite consisting of Negro and Indian Suites; Taylor, Excerpts from "Through the Looking Glass;" Griffes, The White Peacock; Powell, Natchez on the Hill.

"From the looks of the house, Fred Fennell is harvesting followers."

My neighbor spoke criticism. An honest musician, Fennell works hard. His technic is sound and thorough. This young man has talent for conducting. Let him ripen, so notes will have more authority of life. This is my confidence and my prayer.
