Thanks at Table

One of the good old Catholic customs which seems to be on the wane in the United States is the practice of saying "grace" before and after meals.

"It does seem ungrateful," remarks The Southwest Courier, "for Americans to sit down to roast beef and lamb, beefsteak and chicken, and never say a word of grace." The food makes conversation for everyone but we fail to speak to God. We can imagine bowed heads at many tables in the lands across the sea. The measured portions, the lean diet, the limited slices of bread, bring people to their knees in gratitude that they can hold their bodies and souls together."

Matrimonial Stew

Two preferences in temperature;
Two remedies for head-cold cure;
Two tastes in salads, steaks, desserts;
Two types approved in gowns and shirts;

Two notions as to what is funny;
Two weaknesses for spending money;

Two kinds of drink to mix or shake;
Two plans what kinds of trips to take;

Two methods used to make amends;
Two standards for selecting friends;

Two sets of principles to stress;
Two thoughts of what makes happiness.

But mix them all together
And when you have, when you are done,
A most astounding miracle—
Two hearts that beat as one.

DEFENDS THE CHURCH

"It is difficult to escape the conclusion that one who is not interested in the Catholic Press to the point of supporting it, is not deeply interested in the Catholic Church. For the Catholic Press interprets the teaching of the Church, it defends the cause of the Church and it portrays the worldwide life of the Church." — Archbishop Mooney.
