Abdul Colors The Eggs

(This is an account of a personal experience of a Medical Mission Sister. It happened while she was nursing superintendent of a hospital in Gwalior, India. She is one of the pioneer members of the Society of Medical Missionaries of Free Chase, Philadelphia.)

The Indian nurses had never heard of Easter Eggs. Neither had Abdul, our cook, but after a few preliminary instructions in coloring eggs, he confidently said, "Sister Sahib, you shall see. I shall be able to color the eggs bee-ooooo-fully." He then set off with orders to buy at least five dozen strictly fresh eggs and coloring, with a parting admonition to hard boil the eggs and then wait my arrival. I would come down to the kitchen between 8 and 9 o'clock that evening. The Easter surprise for the nurses was well on its way.

I went to the kitchen well past the appointed hour. In the center of the floor squatted Abdul. On one side was a large heap of eggshells; in front were the cups of color lined up in magnificent array; and on the other side, piled high on a platter, were the eggs, pale, anemic, faded, sickly looking blobs. Abdul, his hands dripping with the mixture of dyes, picked the last bit of shell from the last egg, and dropped it triumphantly into the cup of red. Then he looked up. "See Sister Sahib, aren't they nice?"

The words which had been spoken out of me began to stumble back. "Abdul! What have you done! Ooooo!"

He looked bewildered. "What have I done? Sister Sahib, I have colored the eggs!"

"But the nurses can't eat those! They would be poisoned!" Abdul looked unconvinced. "Didn't you know, Abdul, that the eggs should be colored in their shells?"

"But the shells," he protested, "have to be thrown away before you can get the eggs. So why color the shells?"

Despite his protests, I forced him to throw his precious products away. He obeyed with an air of despair. It was too late to buy more eggs. The only consolation I could offer Abdul was that we would color eggs next year.

Easter Mass next morning was a time of unalloyed joy. Afterwards we threaded our way back through the narrow crowded streets to the hospital. Just inside the door we met Abdul with a tray in his hands heaped with Easter SEggs. This time the eggs were safe in their shells of red and green and blue and yellow. The nurses were delighted. Abdul swelled with pride. "Didn't I tell you, Sister Sahib, that I should color the eggs bee-ooooo-fully!"

Trinity Sunday, Easter Duty Deadline, May 31

Easter duty is the obligation resting upon Catholics to receive Holy Communion at Easter time. It is a mark of fidelity to membership in the Church. If one is in a state of sin, the duty also involves the obligation of receiving the Sacrament of Penance before approaching the altar rail.

Easter time, or the prescribed period in which one must receive Holy Communion, extends from the first Sunday of Lent to Trinity Sunday in the United States; from Ash Wednesday to Low Sunday in Great Britain, and from Ash Wednesday to the Octave of SS. Peter and Paul in Ireland.

Trinity Sunday this year falls on May 31. Thus May 31 is the last day on which a Catholic in the United States may fulfil his or her Easter duty.

St. Joseph

During March we pray to Thee, Dear St. Joseph, hear our plea; That this war we pray will cease, And we will have that joyous peace.

Dear St. Joseph, each day we pray, For the soldiers who fight far away, Through the hands which once were free.

Dear St. Joseph hear our plea, —Angelina Scipione, 8th Grade, Holy Cross School.

If you are well with God, all is well with us, though the thickest darkness of adversity be round and about.
