Moon Determines Easter Day

Easter is not always celebrated on the same day each year. Since the Council of Nice in 325, it is always observed on the first Sunday following the first full moon after the vernal equinox. Hence this Sunday may come as early as March 22 and as late as April 25. Easter regulates all the movable feasts of the Church.

'Stabat Mater' Work Of Franciscan Monk

The "Stabat Mater," hymn sung in Holy Week throughout the Christian world, was originally a poem composed by a thirteenth century Franciscan monk, Jacopone da Todi.

In his youth Jacopone led a sinful life. The violent death of his wife, whom he discovered to be wearing under her costly garments a coarse shirt of hair as her atonement for his impiety, turned Jacopone from his evil ways.

His "Stabat Mater" he referred to as his "poem of tears." While painting, sculpture and literature each has its individual method of presenting the wonder of the Easter miracle, music celebrates the festival most gloriously.

Paschal, or Easter, feast among Christians goes back to the remotest antiquity, though the exact date of its introduction is not determined. It is doubtless the oldest Christian feast, as old as Christianity itself.

On Easter Sunday the Church's liturgy symbolizes joy unbounded. The mystic union of the Church with Christ in His risen splendor puts her in a transport of joy that continues to vibrate throughout Eastertide. It is especially present in the first week, in which the liturgy has a different Mass formula for each day. Ever do the words recur: "This is the day which the Lord hath made: let us be glad and rejoice therein."
