

Holy Name Bowling Tournament To Open April 26th

Entries Will Close Midnight, April 19

Bowlers from various sections of the diocese and even beyond the diocesan lines will participate in the 16th Annual Holy Name Bowling Tournament opening on April 26 at Franklin Bowling Hall, 204 North Water St., Rochester, N. Y.

Sponsored by the Catholic Men's Bowling Association and sanctioned by the American Bowling Congress, the five-man teams contest brings outstanding Holy Name Society, parish and other Catholic men's teams for the tournament which continues until Sunday, May 4.

Announcing the tournament, Secretary Irving Nientimp tells the bowlers: "While we realize that our country is at war and our thoughts should be on producing munitions to the extent of final victory, we also realize that we are in need of a little recreation."

The tournament managers have arranged for a special squad to bow on Thursday afternoon, April 26, for defense workers.

There will be two classes, "B" from 750 to 825 and "A" 830 to 900. The entry fee is $10.00 per team and only sanctioned bowlers may participate.

Entries close at Midnight, April 19, and none will be accepted after that date, the secretary announces.

The period from Sunday, April 26 to Sunday, May 3, allows two Sundays and one Saturday for out-of-town bowlers.

Entry blanks are available from Irving Nientimp, Secretary, 41 Devonshire Court, Rochester, N. Y. Telephone, Queens 3667-W. He asks entrants to make all remittances payable and mail with entry form filled out to him.

WHAT WAS THE MATTER?

By EMMA GARY WALLACE

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 3 West 10th Street, New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

Robert had been an only child for nearly four years. Then his new brother Tony arrived and took the center of the stage.

At first relatives and sometimes occasional callers teased Robert about having his "nose put out of joint" because so much attention was being given to the baby.

Robert was manifestly troubled. "Young children are often jealous," Mother and Daddy had sometimes remarked, "but he'll soon get over that and love his little brother as much as the rest of us do."

Occasionally, they made a special effort to pet and make much of Robert, for they did not want him to feel pushed aside or neglected. As time went on, he became interested in Baby Tony, often playing with him and being amused by his cute little ways.

When the time came for Robert to go to school, he seemed to have no difficulty in getting along with the other children, but for some reason or other, he was listless and inclined to daydream.

One of his teachers reported to his mother that Robert did not appear to be enthusiastic about anything, nor to be able to concentrate. She suggested that it might be well to have the child checked over physically by a competent physician.

The young mother was distressed, and after consulting with Robert's father, she took the child to the family physician.

The doctor could find nothing physically wrong and thought it might be that something was disturbing the child's sense of security — perhaps with regard to his home relationships. He suggested that Robert be studied by a specialist in child psychiatry.

This observer was not long in finding out that Robert was still suffering from the submerged fear that his mother and father did not love him as much as they did little Tony, who was now two years old.

Robert had been sent to a summer camp the season before, so that he might be out in the open, but seemingly he had not been benefited. The reason was that he had taken his trouble with him.

He was naturally quiet and reserved and so lived, for the most part, in a world of his own making.

From this point on, Robert's parents definitely changed their tactics. Very soon the child was sleeping better, taking more interest in his meals, and was decidedly happier in his school associations. His teacher reported that he was making much better progress in school and was plainly enjoying it.

We often are reminded that the older child may be jealous when the new baby first arrives. The condition is usually treated as only of passing significance and character. It is thought that shortly the older child will become accustomed to the new member of the family and make the best of the situation.

But this attitude is entirely wrong. The older child should, from the first, not be obliged to endure but be helped to enjoy the little stranger. It should be his baby, needing his love and care. Then, he will be glad to share with him. It will please him that his mother and father are Baby's mother and father too. Instead of suffering a feeling of loss and insecurity, he will gain a delightful sense of importance and responsibility.

Open NCCS Club For Industry Workers

HUMBOLDT, Tenn. — Dedication ceremonies of the USO Club, designed for war industry workers and their families and operated by the Women's Division of the National Catholic Community Service, have just been held.

Representing Mayor Howard J. Holtz, of Humboldt, C. W. Rooks, editor of the Courier Chronicle, in the welcoming address stated: "We appreciate the USO and NCCS in our midst. The club will be of real service to Humboldt. As you build up the strength and character of young people when in this house, you will build up the power and strength of the army, the navy and of the nation."

"We are especially happy that this club will be motivated by a religious purpose and we are sure that the young people will be as well taken care of here as in the church itself."
