Spain's Vocations Among Brothers Grow

LOS ANGELES. All the institutions conducted by the Brothers of St. John of God in Spain have now been restored and the three novitiates conducted by the congregation are so crowded that there is a long waiting list of aspirants it was learned by Brother Matthias Barrett, American provincial, in a letter received from the Very Rev. Ephrem Blandeau, Father General in Rome who has just completed visitations in Spain and Portugal.

Getting On In The World

THE MOTIVE:
If we carefully reflect on the profession we follow or the business in which we are employed, we shall find that one or more of the motives of fear self-interest, and love influences us consciously or unconsciously in exact proportion to the estimate we form of our work and the way in which we discharge its duties.

Take the example of a physician. He acquires a reputable practice and begins to rise to the top in his profession. But, suppose he acquires at the same time a passion for drink and gambling. What will be the consequence? His patients sooner or later will discover his weakness. They will begin to lose confidence in him, and will drop off one by one. His income will vanish and himself and his family face want and destitution.

Troubles may force him deeper into drink until his health is ruined and his professional status practically nil. He will either end his days in the gutter, or a mad-house or even possibly be tempted to suicide.

Such things have happened. And the fear of them happening to you, or to me, has a considerable influence on professional and business people. Many of them indeed, would care little for their self-interest and perhaps less for the other motive of love for their family. But when they think of the degradation, the loss of reputation and caste their self respect is aroused and they watch the line over which they fear to step carefully.

The motive is certainly not the best but for want of a better, it can and may be effective.
