

Cardinal Seen Stronger Than Hitler

WINESBOR, Ont. — "Oppression and persecution invariably produce heroes in the Christian religion, and the latest one is His Eminence Michael Cardinal Fahey, Archbishop of Montreal," says the Windsor Star, local daily secular newspaper. The editorial continues:

"His daring indictment of the Nazi regime, from his pulpit, has filled the world with admiration. It is another demonstration that the high principles of the true Christian can never become subservient to human evil, no matter how strongly armed.

"There is, however, a further significance in this incident. Thus far, the Cardinal has escaped Nazi retaliation. In fact there is no word of any action being taken against him. It is another sign that Hitler is seriously doubtful of his former course of warfare against the Christian religion, and that he is seeking means of conciliation. It is a virtual admission on his part that he has met a force stronger than himself."

It is but pride and self-will that says, "Give me something huge to fight, and I should enjoy that; but why make me sweep and dust?"
