Father Lane's Appeal To Let Prisoners Join Army Carried Widely By Press

Widespread publicity has been given the appeal of the Rev. Francis J. Lane, chaplain of the Elmira Reformatory and president of the American Prison Chaplains' Association, that many inmates of prisons be given an opportunity to serve in the armed forces of the United States.

Complete text of Father Lane's appeal appeared in the July 2, 1942 issue CATHOLIC COURIER on page 1, headed "Can Prisoners Really Help In Our War Effort?"

Father Lane's statement of his views was carried on the wires of the Associated Press and published in the metropolitan press and leading newspapers throughout the East.

A New York State legislative committee in which Assemblyman Dutton B. Peterson of Ogdon, Schuyler County, is interested, is now investigating means of releasing prison inmates for military service and a survey of possible eligibles has been made at the Reformatory.

Father Lane asks if a great many prisoners are to be kept in confinement for one mistake in their lives. "We say no," he declared, "because a large percentage of them are first offenders. We don't say they should be handed the world on a silver tray, but we do say these men should be given a chance to prove that their mistake was really a mistake."

The chaplain declared many former prisoners have entered the armed forces and he added:

"But why must the rest of these men wait until their debt to society has been paid before they can volunteer . . . They have learned the folly of their ways . . . and have homes and loved ones to protect just the same as every American . . . They would make excellent soldiers."

Business men in particular, Father Lane said, should "include the prisoner and parolee in new business plans for war and the peace that is coming. It is time that the modern businessman cast aside his prejudices, a prejudice that is the result of million pictures, newspaper and the work of some of our novelists."

Prisoners already are helping to "keep 'em flying," he explained by producing goods for the armed forces, converting their small income into war stamps and bonds and giving their blood for Red Cross tanks.
