

Women's Service Institute Brings Action In Auburn

Groups Call Out Volunteers To Work Out Institute Ideas

AUBURN The National Council of Catholic Women, sponsors of the "Call to Service," a project of the National Council of Catholic Charities, conducted the third in a series of four meetings, held in the Diocese of Rochester, on Thursday, July 16, in the Catholic Daughters Home in South Street.

These meetings are held for the purpose of training women for charitable work within their parishes at the present time and for the reconstruction period following the war. They are the first meetings of their type to be held in the country and their program will serve for similar meetings which are scheduled for the other dioceses in the United States.

The women of Auburn were enthusiastic in responding to the volunteer service of the Catholic Charities and a large representation of Catholic organizations took part in the program. Mrs. John O'Toole was general chairman of arrangements and she was assisted by Miss Elizabeth Harmon, publicity. Mrs. Stuart Treat, Miss Isabel Goss and Mrs. Dora Mansfield, hospitality. Mrs. Stephen Doyle and Mrs. Emilie Toutant, registration. Mrs. Clarence Hayden and Mrs. John Welch, literature. Mrs. Joseph Barry and Miss Irene Cooper, telephone.

Mrs. John C. O'Toole, president of the Auburn Deanery of the National Council of Catholic Women, presided at the sessions. The meeting was opened with a prayer by Very Rev. Dean John A. Conway, spiritual director of the Auburn Deanery Council.

The Rev. Gerald C. Lambert, Diocesan Director of Catholic Charities, explained the purpose of the conference and Miss Cecelia M. Yawman, president of the Rochester Diocesan Council of the N.C.W., made a few brief remarks. The principal addresses at the session were given by Miss Irma Piepho of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Lee Kenney of Fremont, Ohio. The most interesting part of the program was the "Quiz Session" conducted by Rt. Rev. Msgr. John J. O'Grady, executive secretary of the National Catholic Charities who endeavored to awaken the women of Auburn to the need of charitable work as outlined by his office and to help them to formulate plans for the Auburn organization. Several Auburn women responded to his questions and gave a report of the work of their groups during the past year.

The booklet, "The Call to Service" was explained at the Auburn meeting and the methods of volunteer service described. The speakers brought out the point that cooperation in all the dioceses of the country was necessary for a successful completion of the Volunteer Program. Citing the literature drive as an example it was said "it would not be possible to rid Auburn of indecent literature if Syracuse did not work on the same plan for the Syracuse dealer could then bring his filthy literature to Auburn to sell and the campaign would not be successful." Father Lambert made a special plea for homeless children and asked cooperation of the women with the Diocesan Charities Office.

As a result of the conference a meeting of all the officers of the Catholic Women's Organizations in the City of Auburn, all the representatives at the conference on Thursday, and all women interested in Social Service Work and willing to devote their time to volunteer service, will be held at the Catholic Daughters Home in South Street, at 8:00 o'clock on Thursday evening.

The frolic will afford the people a week of recreation within walking distance. Mother's Cable of Reunion of War-Dispersed Family Priest's Ordination Gift

NORWALK, Conn.—On the day that he was ordained to the priesthood here, the Rev. Jean Deckmyn, C.S.S.P., of Dunquerque, France, received a cable from his mother informing him that the members of his family had been reunited in Marseille. She did not know it was his ordination day. Accordingly, Father Deckmyn cabled his first blessing.

Father Deckmyn had taught in the College of St. Pierre, Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, before he was recalled to France for military training. In the fall of 1930 his military service ended. The authorities then advised him to come to the United States to finish his studies for the priesthood.

The cablegram was his ordination gift from his reunited loved ones, dispersed at the time of the fall of Dunquerque.

Need For Nurses' Aides Cited By Archbishop

NEW ORLEANS—Termining work as volunteer nurses' aides, patriotic and a work of mercy, the Most Rev. Joseph F. Rummel, Archbishop of New Orleans, addressed a letter to pastors in response to a request made by the office of Civilian Defense in behalf of the American Red Cross.

"The need for a large corps of such aides," he wrote, "is very urgent. They will be called upon to render service during the emergency of war in hospitals and in Armories as the need arises either to replace professionally trained nurses who are called to work in the front lines or to assist in the hospital conditions which require increased personnel."

"May I suggest, Reverend dear Father, that you bring this to the attention of your congregation and that you give special encouragement to the members of your community of the Blessed Virgin and other societies for married or single women, reminding them that registration affords them a splendid opportunity for patriotic service, which has in it the added merit of a definite corporal work of mercy."

War's Vagaries Make Master of Novices a 'Master of Lepers'

NEW YORK.—From Master of Novices to Master of Lepers, that is what the war in the Pacific has done for the Rev. Vincent J. Kennally, S.J., former Associate Editor of Jeuneur.

Father Kennally, who was Rector and Master of Novices at Navalches, Philippines Islands, went to the island of Cullion to give a retreat to the lepers there. The war broke out in the course of the retreat. Due to the Japanese blockade of the island, the food situation became desperate and many of the 1,000 lepers in the largest leper colony in the world were faced with starvation.

The Rev. Anthony L. Gamp, S.J., Jesuit Superior of Cullion, succeeded in obtaining permission from the Japanese to have food shipped in. But it was up to him to find the necessary ship and also the food. Leaving Father Kennally in charge of the lepers, Father Gamp took a small native boat and made his way to the island of Panay. There he collected food and succeeded in obtaining the use of a small inter-island steamer.

The Rev. Pacifico Ortiz, S.J., who is at present in this country as chaplain to President Quezon, saw Father Gamp in Panay several months ago and believes that he reached the island of Cullion with the precious food supplies for the lepers. Father Kennally, however, remained on the island to assist Father Gamp. Meantime, his novices have been moved from Navalches to the Jesuit university in Manila, where their studies are being continued under the direction of the Rev. Carroll L. Foss, S.J.

Father Kennally is a native of Boston, Mass.

PRISONERS OF WAR MADE THIS ALTAR

Artists and craftsmen among Italian prisoners in an Egyptian camp made this unique altar. Constructed from odds and ends around the camp, it is composed chiefly of sand and water. The colors were obtained by grinding various stones brought from nearby hills, burnt wood and tea leaves. The marble effect was created by spraying sour milk from a "Fiji" pump. For tools they used nails, flat-iron at the end, old spoons and tins. British Official photo. (N.C.W.C.)
