HOLLAND AIR RAIDS DUE TO NAZIS, PRIEST STATES

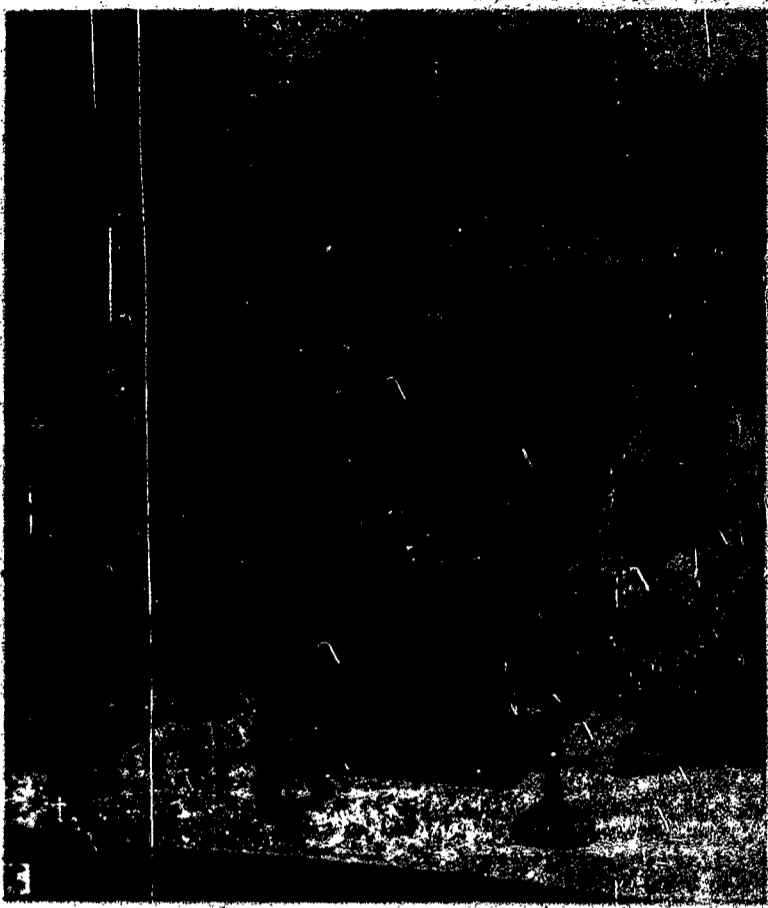

LONDON. The charge that German Luftwaffe raids are being systematically carried out over Holland with the intention of creating hostility against the British was made by the Rev. Canisius Monchen O.S.B., who has escaped to England from the Netherlands.

Following British raids on military objectives, Father Monchen asserts, the Nazis have bombed civilian centers. He reports the following instance:

The British bombed a railway train on a siding near Amersfoort. At 2 A. M. some hours later, although no alarm had been sounded and no anti-aircraft guns had gone into action, unidentified planes flew over Amersfoort and dropped bombs on residence. The German authorities issued a statement blaming the Royal Air Force, but the next morning a parish priest found a fragment of a German bomb in the neighborhood. Later the same priest saw two entries recorded by the German air-raid precaution organization on the night of the raid in question. The first reported the presence of the British planes. The second said "German bombers take off."
