Church Is At Pre-War Normalcy In Islands, Hawaii Priest States

WASHINGTON — (N. C.) — The work of the Catholic Church in a Hawaii on the alert against the ever-present danger of new enemy attacks is being carried on with almost a pre-war normalcy through the leadership of the Most Rev. James J. Sweeney, Bishop of Honolulu. This statement was made here this week by the Rev. Hubert Winthagen, S.S.C.C., of the Cathedral of Our Lady of Peace, Honolulu, who has been visiting the United States. Father Winthagen, who has been in Hawaii for the past 10 years, has come to the United States at the request of the National Catholic Community Service to study NCCS operations. He is active in welfare work for service men in Hawaii.

Father Winthagen said immediately upon Bishop Sweeney's arrival in Hawaii following the Pearl Harbor debacle, His Excellency became active not only in placing the resources and facilities of the Church at the disposal of the military authorities but also of organizing the Church's work on a war basis. As a result, the priest said, the Bishop has cooperated and collaborated most thoroughly with the military authorities and because of this the diocese has been able to carry on its spiritual and ecclesiastical affairs with a minimum of disturbance.

The Bishop has been able to reopen this school year St. Stephen's Seminary in Honolulu and Catholic education continues, in spite of the fact that several Catholic educational institutions have been taken over by the military authorities for such uses as hospitals and barracks. Notable among these institutions is St. Louis College, which is conducted by the Brothers of Mary, with headquarters in Dayton, O.

Father Winthagen said that in the case of Catholic schools utilized by the military authorities both teaching Brothers and pupils are using public schools. Arrangements have been made whereby the buildings are used part time by the Catholic and public school pupils or simultaneously by both groups in different parts of the buildings. In many outlying districts, however, Father Winthagen said, Catholic schools are operating as usual.

The Honolulu priest said welfare work for service men in the Hawaiian Islands is largely mobile, because the benefits in most cases must be brought to the men on various stations. He said the Columbus Welfare Building in Honolulu has been turned over for USO operations, and service men are assisted there when they go to the city on leave.

Father Winthagen said the churches in Honolulu are packed for services by uniformed soldiers and sailors and civilians are edified by the notable evidence of religious devotion among the men in the armed forces. By the same token, he said, Catholic religious are participating actively in civilian defense work, many nuns working for the Red Cross and Brothers assisting in hospitals.

Catholic Action Groups Flourish In Dangerous North African Areas

MADRID — In Tangier, the international zone of Morocco which was annexed by Spain in June, 1940, Catholic Action now is flourishing.

The cosmopolitan city, with its many races and many religions, had long been a place dangerous to those of the Catholic Faith, who found it difficult to keep in touch with their Church.

Catholic Action groups have been established and by the fall of 1941 associations of men and of youth were functioning. The men's association has organized a very active St. Vincent de Paul Society. A recent series of lectures on religious topics attracted large audiences.

War Bonds As College Tuition

DETROIT.—War bonds will be accepted next year in part payment of tuition at Marygrove College here, as a contribution to the war effort. Students will be permitted to pay up to one-fourth of their tuition in bonds and resident students may use bonds to pay up to one-fourth of their tuition and living expenses at the college.

"The college administration realizes the desirability of the plan in many organizations of requiring employees to invest a specified percentage of earnings in war bonds," Sister M. Honora, President of Marygrove College, said in announcing the new plan. "But it is also aware that this buying may work a temporary hardship in families with a sizable education budget."

Bonds, to be acceptable, must be of the F or G series and made out in the name of the college. They will be accepted as of their purchase price value. War stamps in books only, and of a minimum value of $5 will also be accepted.
