

COL. HOOPER, PROMINENT COLORED CATHOLIC, HEADS OAHU ANTI-AIRCRAFT UNIT

HONOLULU — Col. Chauncey M. Hooper, prominent colored Catholic of New York, is in command of a large contingent of colored soldiers, mostly from Harlem, now manning anti-aircraft batteries in the case fields near Pearl Harbor.

Col. Hooper served overseas in World War I, having enlisted with the 368th Central Postal Directory. He was selected for officer training and returned to the 368th as a lieutenant. After the war he continued law training, was admitted to the bar and became a prominent attorney. He is married and is a member of St. Charles Bernece parish.

In his youth Col. Hooper attended the Church of St. Benedict the Moor on 3rd Street, New York. His mother was organist there and he himself was a member of the altar society.

Serving as Adjutant of the 368th Regiment, he was advanced to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He was promoted to command of the regiment when Brig. Gen. Davis was transferred to the South, and soon thereafter was assigned to overseas service in the Pacific.

WAR WORKERS NEED RESTFUL HOME LIFE

In peacetime or war, the health of the breadwinner is of supreme importance to his family and his employer, because a determined and productive and earnings right now, with all-out production the goal of American industrial effort, the government, too, has a vital interest in the physical well-being of every wage earner. Each day lost through preventable sickness is a gift to the enemy.

Wives and mothers, who sometimes complain that they are left out of the great war effort, are all-important in keeping the health of their men folk at top level. Medical science places great stress upon the connection between a serene orderly home, nutritious wholesome food, domestic tranquility, and a man's working capacity and health record. Homemakers therefore have the great responsibility of seeing to it that home environment is such that it offers the men of the family immediate release from the tension of a hard working day. To the creation of such a healthful family environment good housekeeping is essential. Cleanliness, with all that it means in the way of comfort through clean clothes, clean rooms, clean bedding, and clean bodies, is of practical value in maintaining the fitness and efficiency of those who are engaged in war production whether it be in a factory or on a farm. The man who leaves a well-ordered household and knows that he will return at night to a neat home, clean children, and a dainty wife is able to put his best effort into the job without distracting thoughts about home conditions. He is less likely to be careless and become involved in accidents which slow the work as well as disable him.

The wife who realizes the relationship between her housework and the country's victory will look upon washing, ironing, cleaning, and cooking with new respect, since these tasks are also part of the war effort. They may not seem like very dramatic tasks, but they are as important to the war workers as the ground crew is to the air pilot.
