'CAN'T A GUY DO ANYTHING?'

By TUELLA DICK

"Bruce please don't turn the water on the window box. The sun's too hot." Mrs. Bradley's voice held a weary note of irritation. Why must Bruce be so trying on a hot, busy morning like this?

There was, also, a distinctly peevish note in her eight-year-old son's response, "Jimminy, Mom! Can't a guy do anything?"

"Bruce, you've said that twenty times this morning, I do believe. I wish you'd try not to say it so much."

"Have I, Mom?" The small boy stared up through the open dining room window at her. "Twenty times! Whew, that's a lot."

He was thoughtful a moment, then exclaimed, "Well, Mom, I've only said it when you told me not to do things, so that proves what a lot of things I'm not allowed to do around here."

With a shock, Mrs. Bradley realized that her son's remark was true. He hadn't repeated his monotonous query any oftener than she had said, "Don't."

If his expression had been tiresome to her disciplined, adult mind, how much more so, must hers have been to him!

Mrs. Bradley felt that she must do some deep thinking. She couldn't do it with the clear-eyed gaze of her son upon her.

"Bruce, will you go on an errand for me?" she asked. There was no irritation in her tone, now.

"Sure, Mom, sure. Where to? May I take Tuck along?" His tone, too, had changed—it was eager and had lost all fretfulness.

"Yes, you may take Tuck. It will be a nice little trip for him. I have a magazine to send to Mrs. Jenson. It's quite a distance to go this warm morning."

"I don't mind—honest I don't mind—honest I don't. There's lots of shade."

There was a mist in Mrs. Bradley's eyes as she watched him step blithely down the street.

"The first 'Please do', instead of 'Don't, that I have said this morning and look how he responds to it," she murmured contritely.

She stopped her work and sat down in a chair. "Let me see. What are some of the 'don'ts' that I have handed out so freely to that child this morning?" she said. "There was, 'Don't make Tuck growl', 'Don't come to the table until you have combed your hair', 'Don't leave the screen door open', 'Don't ask for another cent today.' Don't O, I had better get a pencil and some paper and go at this in a businesslike way!"

Carefully, Mrs. Bradley listed all the "don'ts" she could remember having inflicted on Bruce that morning. Opposite them, she listed the positive requests which she might have made in place of the negatives which had so inked her small son. She now realized how easy it would have been to say "Please take Tuck out for a little run, Bruce" instead of "Don't get that dog to barking. I'm trying to phone."

Instead of telling him not to water the petunias, she could have suggested some use of the water which would have been beneficial or at least would have done no harm.

"With a little thought, I could have avoided all those unwise negatives," she decided. "In the future, I shall certainly try to avoid them. But if I forget, when Bruce says, "Can't a guy do anything? I'll say 'Surely a guy can do something, Son,' and then I'll suggest something interesting to do. I have a suspicion," with a wry smile, "that it will help my disposition as much as it does his."

And Mrs. Bradley was right, as she soon proved.

Proclaim Praises

Cleanse my heart and my lips, O Almighty God, Who with a burning coal didst cleanse the lips of the Prophet Isaias; and in Thy loving kindness vouchsafe so to purify me that I may be enabled worthily to proclaim Thy praises. Through Christ Our Lord. Amen.
