

WE KNOW THE MASS

By CATHERINE BEERE

Illustrations by Robb Berke

A SIMPLY presented, beautifully illustrated exposition of the Holy Sacrifice, here is a book which every preschool and early-grade child should have. We know the Mass follows the priest and acolyte prayer for prayer and action for action. With pictures in red and black and the text beside them, the Mass unfolds naturally for the child, in all its beauty and meaning.

"There have been a number of books for young children trying to convey the Supreme Miracle of the Mass by explanation. But to our knowledge there has not been any heretofore which has seemed so practical an achievement as this one."

Our Lady's Birthday

Tuesday, September 8th, will be the birthday of Our Blessed Mother. Fifteen dollars will purchase Her statue for a mission Chapel. Give this gift to Our Blessed Mother. It will please Her and help the missions.

FOOD FOR HUNGRY

The food situation in war countries is serious. The International Red Cross has been able to help some, but the situation remains serious.

The Sacred Oriental Congregation bids us to plead for arms to feed the people of Greece, especially those of the household of the Faith.

Our priests are so occupied assisting the unfortunate that they have little time to teach Catechism. The care of the sick and dying, and helping the poor are their principal occupations. In fact, their charitable aid to non-Catholics and Orthodox have won for them and the Church a very grateful people, many of whom seek to become Catholics.

The Sacred Oriental Congregation assures us that a means will be found to get food to those people if the financial help for the purchase of food is received. An offering, large or small, will be very helpful.

The Holy See is burdened with the support of those heroic priests, since the impoverished faithful cannot maintain themselves, much less their pastors. Knowing that the added labors required of these priests in the present crisis will mean sickness and early death if they are not cared for, it begs the necessities of life for them. Ten Dollars will support one of these priests for a week.

The priestly ministrations are of such importance and consolation to the faithful in these days of dire misfortune, we ask you to give a week's support that they may continue to administer the spiritual and corporal works of God to their people and neighbors.

SCHOOLS TO RE-OPEN

Our mission schools are soon to re-open. Children must be trained and educated as Christ commanded.

To maintain a school is very expensive. Teachers must be paid, books purchased, repairs made. Ten Dollars will pay for a poor child to attend school for a year. Grant a Catholic education to a poor child for a year.

CATECHISMS

Five Dollars will buy a hundred Catechisms. We need thousands to give to converts and school children.

HELPFUL REMEMBRANCE

To build a monument for a deceased parent or relative is fine. But to pray for the deceased is Catholic, is more helpful. Our deceased members share in Forty Masses and the merits of our missionary priests and sisters every day. Enroll your deceased. Annual membership is One Dollar; Perpetual Membership is Twenty Dollars.

SICK CALLS

When the missionary brings Holy Communion to the sick or dying, he carries the Blessed Sacrament in a small vessel called the Pyx. Five Dollars will purchase a Pyx for one of our young missionary priests.

FOR A NEW CHAPEL

You can furnish for a new Chapel, the Altar, Chalice, Missal, Crucifix and two Candelabra, Sanctuary Lamp, Altar Linens, and Set of Vestments for One Hundred Nineteen Dollars. Make this gift to the new mission Chapel to be built in the Near East mission.

IN REPARATION

We must make reparation for sin. That is why we suggest that you ask our missionaries to offer Mass in reparation for the sins you have committed.

YOUR WILL

Every one should make a will. No matter how little you have, you want that little to be left as you wish. If you die without a will, the State law distributes your possessions.

Put into your will the Catholic Near East Welfare Association to aid our missions. Our missionaries will never forget you in prayer.

NEW PARISH

Do you want to establish a new parish? Give Five Hundred Dollars to build a Chapel. Two hundred of people will be able to attend Mass, receive the Sacraments and hear preached the Word of God. The Holy Father will have it built where it is most needed. You will be allowed to select the name for the Parish and Chapel.

A Toast To Quality

A great farmer by a young farmer. Iowa, farmer, member of a Catholic Action Farmer club.

It might almost be the definition of a successful man to say that he is a good farmer.

It might almost be the definition of a good farmer to say that he is a small farmer.

A small farmer has got to be good or he would soon be no farmer at all.

The small farmer is not small in stature but small in acres. In some parts of the country he gets along on forty acres; in other parts he has to have eighty or even two hundred acres. It's the difference between Iowa and South Dakota, for instance, and not the difference between a thousand acres farmed badly and forty acres farmed well that accounts for the number of acres needed. A 200-acre farmer in North Dakota is a small farmer; a 200-acre farmer in Southern Wisconsin is a big farmer.

A small farmer does all his work with horses. He does not use a tractor. If he did he could not be a small farmer. He would have to be a big farmer to pay for his tractor and fertilizer.

The small farmer has a garden which produces so many and much of vegetables and berries as the family needs the year round. An orchard gives an ample supply of fruit.

His corn, oats, and grain generally, are not sold for the best price but are put into his bins to feed his livestock. Only when his bins begin to overflow does he think about selling his grains for money. Being a small farmer he does not mind having enough in his bins for a couple of years.

His livestock, in their turn, by a marvelous natural process convert corn and oats into milk and meat for the family. His large brood of hens, by something of the same process, make eggs the year round out of the same corn and oats plus skim milk from the cow.

The small farmer buys only what he and his family cannot raise or make. He does not buy all those luxuries advertisers try to sell him as necessities. His frugality is a virtue that continually sharpens his wits.

Because his farm is small, the good farmer loves it. He is able to love it because it is apt so big that he can't get his arms around it.

The soil is his ally. He expects to pass it on better than he found it. He depends on it, but it is like depending on God. His dependence on God is what makes him an independent man.

His recognition of God in all things is what makes him a man disposed to supernatural religion. Every good farmer is a Catholic at heart.

In reality, the small farmer is the most successful man in the world, but in the eyes of the modern world he is a failure. It's almost a sure sign of worth to be considered worthless by the world.

The small farmer has no fortune in money; he has no claim to fame; he has no social standing (though he ought to have). But since when are these things the true measure of a good man? — Joe Konnyk.

Aiding Troops

LONDON.—The formation of a Coordinating and Supervisory Committee for American Catholic welfare organizations serving American and allied troops in Great Britain has been announced by His Eminence Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Archbishop of Westminster. The Committee forms an agency with which the National Catholic Community Service will have close contact and through which assistance to Catholic welfare agencies for United States service men in England will be channeled.
