FAMILY LOYALTY OR INJUSTICE?

Excitedly and ahead of time, my three little nieces burst into the living room where their mother and I were chatting. Jean, the ten-year-old, threw herself into her mother's arms, sobbing.

"You poor lamb!" Jean's mother instantly had become the primitive mother, alert to defend her young.

Miss Lenwood conducted a well-recommended vacation play school. When not receiving piano instruction from Miss Lenwood, pupils were kept happily occupied with the singing and dramatization games her assistants directed.

"But, Father, isn't meat as good on Friday as any other day?" "Certainly, Captain, but why do you sometimes put a soldier who is guilty of an offence on bread and water?"

"Well, how about fasting?" "Isn't it too hard?" "Tell me, Captain, why do you wear such a heavy helmet?"

"Army regulations: besides this helmet protects the head from the strokes of the enemy." "Well, Captain, fasting is a Church regulation, and it protects our souls from the blows of our mortal enemy, the devil."

"But you love sister Jean more, I hope," their mother said quickly. "Your poor sister, who's been sick so much?"

"He—He's out," replied the clerk nervously. "What's he done this time?" "In the advertisement for my valve-less motor," stormed the visitor, "he's turned the second 'u' into a 'u'."

"Washington," wrote Gladstone, "was the purest figure in all human history."

She continued in this strain until Patsy and Lois looked conscientiously at Jean. She had a triumphant gleam in her eyes as she ceased wailing.

The next morning, Tuesday, Jean tried to divert her sisters' thoughts from the school fun they were missing. But the games fell flat.

"The next day I found her in my bedroom closet, crying. She wouldn't say why, but I knew,

Patsy grew more snappish every minute. Their mother was worried. Though her sympathies often swung her, a fine sense of justice usually prevailed.

"She must learn discipline and personality adjustments sometime," her mother said. "She had better do it now than later when more will be at stake."

Curiosity was overcoming Jean's distaste for the school. Instructed by their mother, Lois and Patsy replied pleasantly but briefly when she questioned them.

She likes Miss Lenwood's school. The announcement was made by Dr. J. L. O'Sullivan, Director of the Catholic School Press Association and Dean of the Marquette College of Journalism.

Regulations

A priest and army officer were seated at a table in a hotel on a certain Friday.

"But, Father, isn't meat as good on Friday as any other day?" "Certainly, Captain, but why do you sometimes put a soldier who is guilty of an offence on bread and water?"

"Well, how about fasting?" "Isn't it too hard?" "Tell me, Captain, why do you wear such a heavy helmet?"

"Army regulations: besides this helmet protects the head from the strokes of the enemy." "Well, Captain, fasting is a Church regulation, and it protects our souls from the blows of our mortal enemy, the devil."

Slight Error

The young man strode into the newspaper office and banged his cane on the editor's desk. "Where's the editor?" he shouted.

"He—He's out," replied the clerk nervously. "What's he done this time?" "In the advertisement for my valve-less motor," stormed the visitor, "he's turned the second 'u' into a 'u'."
