

Prominent Grocer Dies Suddenly In Elmira

Jeremiah J. (Jerry) Sullivan, 64, of 303 Davis St., prominent grocer and meat dealer in Elmira, died of a heart attack Monday, September 28, 1942. A sudden collapse while he was packing a grocery order in the store resulted in instant death.

Mr. Sullivan, Elmira-born, was one of the founders of the Serv-U-Save-U Grocers Association, and had been in the meat and grocery business since leaving grade school. He had operated his own market for 40 years, rebuilding it as a combination meat and grocery market when it was burned about 23 years ago.

The Serv-U-Save-U grocers' group found in him one of its most active members and workers. For the last 10 years he acted as advertising manager. He was also chairman of many of the annual outings.

Mr. Sullivan was a member of St. Patrick's Church. He was unmarried.

Pretty soon they'll print "Return to Uncle Sam" on the back of our pay envelopes.

Laud Drama Activity Of NCCS Club Aide

WASHINGTON (AP) — James S. O'Neil, Assistant Director of the USO club operated by the National Catholic Community Service in Fayetteville, N. C., has been cited for outstanding achievement in the dramatic field in a statement by Robert M. Heisinger, USO national program director.

Mr. Heisinger reported that while most dramatic-minded club members with an interest in the theater merely to read and discuss plays, the Fayetteville unit has already produced four serious dramas before capacity audiences and promises to make the stage one of its most important program features.

Drawing from the talent range of 50,000 troops at Fort Bragg, Mr. O'Neil has so far produced Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon," Kenneth Sawyer Goodman's "East of the Sun," John Kirkpatrick's "The Nine Lives of Emily," and "The Vainest," a play by Holowatyky Hall and Robert Middleton. All females roles are played by women guests of the USO center.

Supplementing dramatics as a recreational outlet for the soldiers, the USO unit in Fayetteville also enables men on duty to sing and recite over WFNC, a local radio station which schedules the club for a half-hour broadcast every Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. "Because of the enthusiasm, good fellowship, and creative outlet offered by such programs," Mr.

Death Roll of Week in Southern Tier

Mrs. Marie Donald Roberts of 202 Maple St., died Friday, Sept. 25, 1942, surviving six sons and one daughter. She was buried in St. Ann's Cemetery. Her sons were: John, Capt. U. S. Army, and the Rev. Lawrence Roberts, pastor of St. Ann's. Her daughter was Mrs. Anna E. Hines, Capt. U. S. Army, and the Rev. Lawrence Roberts, pastor of St. Ann's. Her sons were: John, Capt. U. S. Army, and the Rev. Lawrence Roberts, pastor of St. Ann's. Her daughter was Mrs. Anna E. Hines, Capt. U. S. Army, and the Rev. Lawrence Roberts, pastor of St. Ann's.

Les Tansick, 34, of 8 Tracy Pl., died Friday, Sept. 25, 1942. He was a constituent of St. Casimir's Church and was buried in St. Casimir's Cemetery. He was survived by his wife, three sons, and two daughters. His sons were: Frank, Thomas, and Joseph. His daughters were: Mary and Elizabeth.

The solemn High Requiem Mass was celebrated Monday, Sept. 28.

Heisinger said "We are encouraging other USO clubs to follow the example of Fayetteville by exploring the entertainment talents of the men they serve. Professional shows of course will always be popular among the soldiers. But actual participation has long been proven its value in morale and release from tensions."

Previous to joining the staff of the National Catholic Community Service, Mr. O'Neil studied drama at the University of Wisconsin and in Europe. He also did preparatory work at the Pasadena Playhouse.

ST. CECELIA'S (Elmira)

Welcome Assistant Pastor

The Rev. Richard Stanton of Palmyra has been appointed assistant at St. Cecilia's Church to the Rev. Arthur C. Smith, pastor. Father Stanton assumed his new duties Tuesday.

Father Stanton is a former assistant at St. Mary's Church in Elmira.

Confessions will be heard afternoon and evening during the Triduum.

FACING DIFFICULTIES

By LUCIA MALLORY

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 40th Street, New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

"It's been a hard struggle, but the children haven't felt it. They've had the same nice clothes and good times that they had before their daddy was hurt and we had so many bills to pay."

As I looked at my friend, Gladys Milford, while she spoke those words—her careworn face and threadbare coat—I wanted to reply, "But that wasn't fair to the children! They ought to have had a chance to share in taking care of their father. They should have had the joy of making the burden lighter for their mother. How can you expect them to face difficulties courageously, as men and women, if they have had no experience with difficulties while they were growing up?"

Even in families that are fortunate enough to experience no financial stringency, the children should have a bit of practice in finding their happiness in the things that money cannot buy. They should develop resources within themselves that will make them independent of the whims of fortune.

Carefree good times? Of course every child needs them, but he should also have some experiences in standing up against adverse conditions, for at some time or other, they are pretty apt to fall to the lot of every human being.

I know of no family whose members have had more good times continuously, both with each other and with their friends, than that of John and Flora Barron. Yet the children were called upon, a few years ago, to face, with their parents, the misfortune of the loss of their father's well-paid position and long months of waiting for his re-employment.

Their mother talked the situation over with them, frankly and without hysteria, explaining that for awhile they would need to do without many of the things they had formerly considered essential to their happiness. They were not to talk about hard times, and they were not to ask for anything that wasn't absolutely necessary.

Flora told me that the two older children at once suggested that their weekly allowances be reduced or withdrawn. Helen found a job—taking care of a neighbor's baby. Jack earned some money by mowing lawns and tending lawns. When Flora was occasionally called to work at a substitute teacher, the children helped her by doing as much of the housework as they could.

Looking back over my association with the family during that hard year, I believe it was that spirit manifested by the whole family, working together and making the best of a bad situation, that enabled their father finally to re-establish himself as the breadwinner, so successfully as he did.

I am sure that Jack and Helen are much better prepared for their own adult lives because they were permitted to face the misfortune understandingly, than they would have been had their parents tried to carry the whole burden themselves.

Even in families that are fortunate enough to experience no financial stringency, the children should have a bit of practice in finding their happiness in the things that money cannot buy. They should develop resources within themselves that will make them independent of the whims of fortune.

Group Cooperates With Government

VILLANOVA, Pa. — The Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., President of Villanova College, has been named a member of a newly-organized Committee on Relationships of Higher Education and the Federal Government appointed by the American Council on Education. This Committee will cooperate with various agencies of the Federal Government, particularly the Joint Army-Navy Personnel Board and the War Manpower Commission. The Committee will in turn appoint sub-committees to work on particular problems as the need arises.

Dedicates Altar

San Francisco — The Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco, has solemnly consecrated the new marble altar in the beautiful chapel of the Home of the Good Shepherd Sisters. The altar was dedicated to Our Lady of Loretto.

The crucifix is the true book of the Christian.
