Sacred Music Correspondence Course Goes Into Many Dioceses

After only three months the Catholic Chormasters Correspondence Course has registered an imposing list of students for its college accredited course in sacred music study. Twenty-eight religious orders of priests and nuns represent seven archdioceses, and nine dioceses.

Music commissions throughout the United States are approving the course as a required course of study for those who intend to hold organ positions in the diocese. One of the attractive features of the course is the opportunity which is still open for charter membership entitling the student to all the future publications of the CCCC which will include the scholarly writings and lessons of such experts as Joseph Bonnet, famous Parisian organist, and Dr. Lapierre, Dean of the Montreal University of Music.

The course will culminate with a two weeks' intensive summer session, the first of which will be held at Milwaukee in 1944, to be followed the same summer by courses in Toledo, Ohio, and St. Louis. Headquarters for the CCCC are at Room 1105, 300 Madison Ave., New York City, N. Y., where full information may be obtained concerning enrollment.
