Property Owners Enabled To Participate In National Fuel Conservation Program

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Wide-spread participation in the national fuel conservation program by property owners in all sections of the country has been greatly facilitated by recent governmental actions designed to encourage fuel-saving measures, Federal Housing Commissioner Abner H. Ferguson declared today.

Through these actions, wartime restrictions have been lifted so that the necessary materials has been permitted, and favorable financing terms made available so that properties now heated by scarce fuels may be converted to coal-burning equipment, and excessive fuel consumption reduced by use of proper insulation, Mr. Ferguson said.

The Commissioner urged property owners to make use of these opportunities in order to help save fuel and to safeguard healthful conditions during the coming winter months. If the property owner lacks cash to pay for furnace conversion or insulation in one lump sum, loans for such purposes may be secured from the private lending institutions operating under the FHA's Title I program, he pointed out.

By a recent order, installation of insulation materials, air cell pipe covering, weather-stripping, and storm windows and doors in order to conserve fuel has been exempted from the War Production Board's Conservation Order L-41. Previously, insulation projects costing more than $200 in the case of one-to-five family houses or more than $1,000 in the case of larger residential structures required specific WPB authorization. The exemption applies to insulation projects started before January 1, 1943 and prohibits the use of rubber, cork, or metal other than for fastenings.

The order also exempted from L-41 all construction started prior to January 1 which is necessary for the conversion or substitution of heating equipment to permit use of fuel other than oil, electricity or gas. Previously, this exemption had applied only to the Eastern States and to Oregon and Washington.

Under WPB regulations, the sale or delivery of equipment to be used for converting equipment burning oil or gas to coal-burning equipment is exempt from the restrictions of Plumbing and Heating Order L-79.

From a financing standpoint, loans to finance furnace conversion or insulation projects are exempt from the Federal Reserve Board's consumer credit regulations. As a result, loans for such purposes under the FHA's Title I program may run for as long as three years in amounts up to $2,500, the maximum terms permitted by the National Housing Act for loans of this type. Title I loans are repaid in equal monthly installments.

Genevan Named Head College Newman Club

GENEVA — Theodore Veit, '44, of Geneva was elected president of the Hobart-William Smith Newman Club at a meeting held following a communion breakfast in St. Stephen's parish house on Sunday.

Composed of Roman Catholic students of the local colleges, the club conducted the best-attended breakfast since it was organized five years ago.

Miss Ruth Amidon, '41 of Batavia was elected vice-president, while Miss Mary Connors, '44, of Geneva received the office of secretary.

Rev. Raymond P. Nolan of St. Stephen's Church and principal of De Sales High School attended the meeting as chaplain, in which capacity he has served since the organization of the local Newman branch. As part of the program, the chaplain delivered a brief presentation on the life and works of the great Cardinal for whom the Newman Club is named.

WOULD BUILD OUTDOOR CHRISTMAS CRIB AT FORT NIAGARA

The following appeal for coins to help build an outdoor Christmas Crib at Fort Niagara as "A Monument To Your Boy" has been received from the Post Chaplain:

"Many of you who have visited your soldier at Fort Niagara, have gazed with wonder upon the beauty of God's House — the little White House of the Post. There was a feeling of pride and sincere relief in your hearts that your boy and your God would be kept close to each other even in this Army camp. To keep this picture even more vividly impressed upon your mind, we have made plans to build a beautiful outdoor Christmas crib in front of our Chapel.

"The soldiers themselves have begun to contribute their pennies, nickels and dimes. But we want to make this crib a monument not only to them, but also to you their dear ones at home. We, therefore, appeal to you mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, wives and sweethearts; to you children of our schools; to you members of Church Sodality and Societies, St. Vincent de Paul Councils and Knights of Columbus, to start a drive for copper, nickel and silver coins, that our monument, your monument, will be one of striking beauty, a tribute to your infant God and your faith in your boys.

Your gifts will be gratefully received by your sincere friend and the pal of your soldier boys, Father Joe, Lieut. Chaplain Joseph W. Hrdlicka, 655 P. O. Box, Niagara Falls, N. Y.
