Jean Sadie Thompson and Queen Victoria. She manages to be more interesting than her role is creditable. Robert Cummings isn't any too happy in the other lead role while Joan Hales looking very well gets no chance to register anything except a sort of dazed bewilderment. Kay Francis is the mother and Ethel Griffen plays the family maid. One of these characters supposed to be quaint Donald O'Connor who was starred in "Get Hip to Love" a couple of weeks ago, is demoted to a walk on for which he doesn't even receive screen credit in "Between Us Girls." Such is stardom in Hollywood.

'Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror'

No you thought Sherlock Holmes and his friend Dr Watson belonged to the dear dead days of the last generation. But they're around again, pooped up in this day of war to apprehend a Lord Haw-Haw and to foil some nasty Nazi agents. Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce carry on in the roles but Sherlock Holmes in modern dress is no more notable a detective than are such boys as Michael Shane and Ellery Queen.

Gilbert Roland, who is one of the most handsome men on the screen, appears in "Isle of Missing Men," which is possibly a point in its favor. I can think of no points in favor of "Bussos Roar."

The Ink Spots, Lucky Millinder's orchestra, Sister Rosetta Tharpe, the wrolid and wonderful singer of rhythmic spirituals, and Peg Leg Bates the one-legged dancer, headlined last week's vaudeville bill. Top talent in the best vaudeville bill presented here for a long time.

We enjoyed doing a radio show with Zasa Pitts, who appeared at the Auditorium in the mystery-comedy "Her First Murder" this week. Here's a very delightful person offstage as well as on. We also radio-interviewed Ruth Chatterton and Ralph Forbes. Very pleasant people but that "perfect divorce" set-up of their smashes of the foolish and phony Richard Crooks, famous tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, appears in concert at the Auditorium Tuesday evening. His concert is under the auspices of the Demasius Temple.
