Getting On In The World

MISS WEARING SLACKS This week, the six inches of the column goes over girls to June Hamilton Rhodes of the Bureau of Fashion Trends. Says she: "Don't put too much emphasis on slacks and mannish clothes. After all, God made woman to be the 'helpmate' of man. As we look about us and view the complete fiasco of civilization, we can't fail to feel that if we had adhered a little more closely to God's laws and wasted a lot less time on our selfish machinations to rob each other, we would find ourselves in a happy, peaceful world with enough of everything for everybody and all the fruits of peace."

Of the future, the post war era, Miss Rhodes expects a day when "home will assume a new dignity, a new meaning, have a new purpose and become a place to live, instead of just being a hat rack, a bath and a garage." Career girls - Whatever that is - aren't going to like it, but continue please, Miss Rhodes: "This is the safest, the sanest and the happiest way to solve our post war problems - and if many men are unemployed when the war is over, our duty is to train women now in expert homemaking and give them inspiration and help to create a desire to relinquish their jobs to men and go back to their own."

The Nun

She shares in the hopes of those that sow. In the gladness of those that reap. She smiles for the joys that the joyful know, And she weeps with the ones who weep.

She prays for the living - she prays for the dead. She joins in the children's fun, And the grief-worn hearts have been comforted By just the words of a Nun.

And a queen might envy her peaceful smile Of radiant and deep content, That tells how duty and love the while In her life and heart are blent.

She walks in the path she chose in her youth, With never a thought for earth, Bright in her loveliness, great in her truth, Gay in her innocent mirth.

In her Master's vineyard with willing hand She toils from dawn to gray, And well for her when she shall stand At the right on Judgment Day.

We had a slogan: "Every day is somebody's birthday." A Hatener wrote: "More than that: I contend that every day is everybody's birthday - the birthday of new opportunities, new possibilities, new...

College Closes

MONTREAL - The Provincial of the Jesuits here has announced the closing of their St. Francis Xavier College, Montreal. The college at one time had an enrollment of 300 students. But last September, due to wartime economic conditions this had dropped to 80.
