The ELECTRIC TRAIN that WASN'T THERE

Six things are hard to understand when you're six. Long before Christmas, Daddy explained why there might not be a new electric train this year. But Jimmy kept on hoping... may be... somehow... Santa Claus.

Jimmy's a good soldier. If necessary he'll get along with his old wind-up train that jumps the track. And Daddy will tell him again how the wonderful electric locomotive with its light and whistle—and all the shining cars—are going into gun parts now.

And maybe Daddy will add that the same electricity which drives tiny trains is also driving the big machines that make bombers and battleships. We hope Daddy does mention it. We're proud of the part that power plays in war production.

Every war plant has had ample electric power when it was needed.

And seven-eighths of all this power comes from the electric companies under American business management—companies like our own E. G. and E.

Power is production—and production points to Victory. . . . Then real Christmas will come again and Jimmy will get his electric train.
