With Catholic Poets

—Lord, is it I?
How came He to this forlorn hill?
And whence that rope within His hand?
And why that hush on all the land?
It waits so still! Be still!

It was two thousand year ago
That this Man died! This is not He,
But a distorted imagery
Of things I would not know.

Strange how those burning eyes of fire
Are mirror of familiar things,
Are they my palms that rough hemp strings?
Is it my love for hire?

O heart, let loose thy anguished cry
Of fear! But only doubt and pain
Forever echo it in vain:
"O Lord, and is it I?"
