

Missionary Says Mass In Street Since New Parish Has No Church

LA PAZ Bolivia. La Razon, Bolivian daily, has published a significant description of the Mass which one of the recently arrived Maryland Missionaries celebrated in the open air at the crossing of two streets in the newly established town of Villa Victoria in the Diocese of La Paz.

The accompanying illustration shows picturesque background of the mass held in a native village. In one corner, resting against the wall of dark bricks, stands a simple altar around which the townspeople kneel. "The Diocese of La Paz," the article said, "recently created the Parish of Villa Victoria and placed it in the care of priests of the Maryland Mission. These priests, who have just arrived in this country, have taken charge in their new parish which does not have a church. But Masses are said on the improvised altar on Sundays and Holy Days at the corner formed by Virrey Toledo and Gonzalez Pizarro Streets.
