Describes Peru

An authority on South American life and customs, Mrs. del Solar addressed the students of the Spanish classes at the college, Mar. 16, on Life and Customs in Peru. Mrs. del Solar illustrated her lectures with interesting exhibits of silver work, pottery, paintings, wood carving and weaving, executed by the natives of the country. A display of Peruvian Alpaca blankets formed one of the highlights of the exhibit.

President Lauds Catholic Sailor In Letter To Mother

COLUMBUS, (C.N.C.)—Mrs. Alice Minor, a member of St. Augustine's parish, here, has received a letter from President Franklin D. Roosevelt, stating he had seen her son, James, while in North Africa, and praised the young sailor's efficient performance of his duties. The sailor is 18 and attended Holy Family and Central High Schools here.

"I thought you might like to know that, while on my recent trip, I saw your son, James," the President wrote. "The efficient manner in which he performed his duties in connection with my visit should be very gratifying to you and I want you to know of my appreciation. You will be glad to know, I am sure, that he was well in good spirits."

ON THE HOME FRONT

Measuring For Slip Covers

Your tape measure and a little figuring can help you save material when making those new slip covers. In estimating goods remember that the length and width of each section must be the same as the widest and longest measurement of the part of the chair to which it is to be fitted plus seams, seat trim-in and flounce fullness. The method of measuring is shown here.

Slip cover material usually comes in thirty-six and fifty inch widths. Presently a narrow chair back may be covered by splitting a fifty inch width of goods. For other chairs thirty six inch material might be cut to better advantage. If the material has a large figure an extra yard will be needed for matching and centering the design. Decide in advance which seams are to be accented with welting or trimming and measure them to determine the amount needed. Clip and save this article as it will be needed to use with the article appearing next week.

NOTE: Do the springs in your chairs need fixing? Mrs. Spear's new Book 2 gives illustrated directions for doing this. This book also contains more than thirty other thrift ideas for keeping your home attractive in war times. Copies of book 2 are available at 10c each plus 2c for postage and mailing. The "Equal Rights Amendment" is again before the Legislature, proposing that "men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction."

It is sponsored by the National Women's Party and other feminist groups and individuals. It is opposed by the National Council of Catholic Women, the great National Organizations of Catholic Women, the National Women's Trade Union League of America, the National League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, the National Council of Jewish Women and the National Consumers' League.

We believe our readers will be glad to have the clear cut objections to this proposed amendment as presented by Lina E. Brunette, Field Secretary, Social Action Department, N.C.W.C., and Consultant, N.C.C.W. Committee in Industrial Problems:

THE Equal Rights Amendment and the Woman Worker

The National Council of Catholic Women is much concerned about the effort being made by the National Woman's Party to bring about the passage of the so-called Equal Rights Amendment.

The champions of this Amendment argue for equality between man and women. The exact text of the Amendment is that "Men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction." It sounds all right, but it will not bear analysis.

Its advocates in the main are professional women who are able to dictate the conditions under which they work, women who have not experienced the fatigue which comes from standing all day at machines, performing repetitive tasks, working long hours and receiving low wages — conditions which have been partially corrected by what has been familiarly called protective legislation.

The National Woman's Party members were not among those of other large women's organizations which worked for Minimum Wage Legislation, for Maximum Hour Laws, which have to a large degree eliminated the sweat shop; for legislation which gave new life and energy to thousands and thousands of women workers.

The women workers who have benefited by these laws are opposed to the Equal Rights Amendment. Why? Because some of the best constitutional lawyers have declared that it will endanger or do away entirely with all labor legislation that affects working women.

A member of the Woman's Party recently stated in a broadcast in defending the Amendment that "States are ignoring so-called protective legislation because to win the war women, too, must work at dangerous wartime trades at night, and some are now even working seven days a week, and no harm is being done to their morals."

Note she used the word "dangerous." It may not have affected their morals (I would as soon trust the morals of women workers as the morals of any women), but who shall say what "dangerous occupations and seven days a week" will do to their health?

Ask Mary Hogan, who used to make egg case Allen, and the Kavinaky girl, who made paper boxes, and the girl who wrapped chocolates or packed soap. They will tell you what these protective laws mean.

If it is a matter of working for victory, any one of them would sacrifice health and comfort if need be for victory, but they want none of these laws abrogated under the guise or mask that it is for patriotism.

They want no amendments that will change the status after the war. Sacrifice now, if necessary, but retain these protective laws for those who will serve in the post-war era.

The National Council of Catholic Women has heard first-hand from women workers who have attended the Institute on Industry how they feel about social legislation, and the Council of Catholic Women intends to continue its fight against the passage of the Amendment.

The Council of Catholic Women is of the opinion that the future mothers need protection in all situations not consistent with their health and welfare.
