Fr. Ehmann To Talk On Church Music At Catholic Women's Club

The Rev. Benedict Ehmann of St. Bernard's Seminary faculty, will give the second lecture in the Lenten series being sponsored by the Catholic Women's Club at their clubhouse, Alexander St., on Friday afternoon, April 2, at 2 o'clock.

Father Ehmann's talk to which he has given the title, "Songs of Mother Church" will comprise an explanation of the Church's mind concerning music in divine worship; the various kinds of church music, the special nature of Gregorian music and its special status for the Sanctuary, the law of the Church regulating sacred music.

Father Ehmann states that it is his hope that his talk will contribute to a better understanding of the most wonderful music ever composed by man for the worship of the All Holy God.

Mrs. Edward L. Zimmer, president of the Catholic Women's Club, has been in charge of arrangements for these Lenten talks. She has been assisted by a large committee which extends a cordial invitation to members of the club and their guests to attend.

Third and final talk in the series will be given on Friday, April 16, by His Excellency, Bishop Kearney on the subject of the "Pontifical Office."

Red Cross work at the club house could use the services of any members interested. At present, the Business Women's group does surgical dressings, each Tuesday evening at 7:30 p. m. The all day group meets on Thursday of each week.

Orestes Brownson's Life Story Told To Cornell Newman Club

ITHACA—Tradition of Orestes Brownson, the Catholic leader, through religious separatism into Catholicism was traced by Dr. Theodore Maynard to a Barnes Hill audience, Sunday evening, March 21.

Dr. Maynard, who spoke under the auspices of the Cornell Newman Club, an Englishman and a convert to Catholicism, has resided for more than 20 years in the United States. Born in 1805, he was converted in 1834, and died in 1876.

Brownson was described by Dr. Maynard as having once been a Universalist minister in Illinois and an example of the "case of a child being the father of the man. While an archdeacon of Vermont, he was allowed to go to see the militia being mustered on the common for the War of 1812, and heard two church elders arguing about predestination. Brownson had his own ideas, and spent the rest of his life, from the time he was 19, arguing his religious theories.

Brownson went to Boston where he became acquainted with the Brook Farm and Fruitlands movements. Although he had little school education, he had taught himself six languages of which he was proud. While in Boston he wrote on social and political subjects and is regarded by Dr. Maynard as having been "a remarkable metaphysician. He came into the Catholic Church by reading a number of French philosophers. From all of them he gained certain ideas and transformed them to his own needs."

Bishop Fitzpatrick of Boston was a bit skeptical to some of Brownson's new theories. He later migrated to New York where he ran into difficulty with the bishop, "going out of his way to antagonize the Irish and the Jesuits," Dr. Maynard said. Brownson thought himself a friend of the Irish, and was interested in seeing them become more "Americanized," the speaker and historian asserted. Later Brownson was offered a chair in a university in Ireland, but it was withdrawn because of pressure from those in this country who did not like him.

The Catholic leader is now buried at Notre Dame University.
