CHILDREN AND SUPERSTITIONS

By MELBA RICHMOND
Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 1 West 60th St., New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

"Get a pin and pick it up. All the day you'll have good luck," chanted Clara picking up a pin from the sidewalk. "Clara!" exclaimed her mother. "Never, never pick up a pin from the sidewalk; it won't be clean. I thought you knew better."

"Yes, Mother—if you say it's all right," answered Clara, looking back over her head and starting forward confidently.

"Who is Mrs. Lake, Clara?" asked Mrs. Kemp who was walking with Clara and her mother. "She comes on Tuesdays to help Mother cook," said the little girl.

Season's Chaplain
Albany, N. Y. - Twenty-third priest of the Diocese of Albany to volunteer for chaplain service, the Rev. Aloysius E. Brennan, former assistant pastor of St. Mary's Church, Little Falls, has been commissioned a lieutenant in the Marine Service and will work out of Oahu Island in Eastern Harbor among the merchant seamen.

"And does she believe in all the old signs and superstitions?" "Well, really, I never inquired. She is clean and industrious and the children like her."

Brennan, former assistant pastor of St. Mary's Church, Little Falls, has been commissioned a lieutenant in the Marine Service and will work out of Oahu Island in Eastern Harbor among the merchant seamen.

"I was just wondering, because your Jackie would not sit down at the play table at Helen's party when somebody counted up and said that he would make the thirteenth and that to be one of thirteen at a table was unlucky."

Brennan, former assistant pastor of St. Mary's Church, Little Falls, has been commissioned a lieutenant in the Marine Service and will work out of Oahu Island in Eastern Harbor among the merchant seamen.

"For Mrs. Lake!" ejaculated Mrs. Jennings. "It must make her very unhappy to be afraid of such things." Then smiling at her little daughter, "These so called signs are not true, dear. They are mistakes. Do you remember that an acquaintance once gave us Cousin Mary's address and we were troubled because it was in such a poor part of the city?"

"Yes, Mother, and Father went to see her and she never had lived there. It was all a mistake.—O, yes! I see what you mean!" and Clara skipped happily on ahead, again, and soon disappeared around the corner.

"I won't leave Clara and Jack with Mrs. Lake in the future," her mother said to Mrs. Kemp. "I must find some one who has had proper training in the care of children. These superstitions might linger in their minds."

"Well," said Mrs. Kemp with a fearful little laugh, "an old lady living near us in my childhood told me about many of the old signs. My mother spanked me, more than once, for believing in them but that only fixed them in my mind more firmly, and to this day I find myself quite pleased if I happen to see the new moon over my left shoulder. My cousin Anne tells me it is perfectly silly, but the fact remains."

"O, Mother," she panted, "let's go right home! Billy Green's rabbit got out and he chased it right in front of me twice. Please turn right around and go back, before something happens."
