

Reveals Intense Sufferings Of Polish Children In Exile

WASHINGTON—“Hitler is forcing Polish children into the Reich in order to Germanize them, but approximately 2,500,000 Poles have been absorbed by the Soviet Union,” declared Bishop Joseph Gawlina, chief of chaplains, Polish Armed Forces, in a nation-wide broadcast yesterday.

The story of the tragic plight of a million Polish children, 400,000 of whom have already died of hunger and exposure, was related by Bishop Gawlina, who asked for the prayers of all Americans for the 300,000 Polish children still held in the Soviet Union.

The heroic prelate-chaplain speaking of the children taken from Poland into Russia said: “They were snatched from their homes in the winter of 1939-1940 from Lodz, Vlna and the entire Eastern part of Poland. For the most part, they were herded into railroad cars with their parents. If they were still living, and brought to the interior of European and Asiatic Russia in bitter cold.

Seek Valors for Parents

When the children arrived in Russia they were placed on cooperative farms where heavy work was their lot. On the tender shoulders of twelve and thirteen-year-old children rests the grave responsibility of supporting their young brothers and sisters. Many of them are seeking in vain for their lost father or mother, as merciless fate separated families by great distances.

“I met a thirteen-year-old boy who at one time was a shepherd and later on became a truck driver. This youngster did his best to keep his father, who was ill, and his sister alive. He buried his mother in the steppes of Russia.”

Many children have been sent to Archangel and to ice-bound Northern Russia, Bishop Gawlina said. Orphans have been scattered in isolated settlements in the northern wastes of Siberia, particularly in the Irkutsk area where the Yenisei River is frozen for all but three months of the year.

“There they live in unbelievable poverty and are—thick very hard. They receive no help from the outside world. Their only consolation is prayer. They have no teachers and no priests; for no one knows where the exiled Polish priests are kept.”

The Polish prelate described other Polish children sent to Iraq, “where I saw things that moved me to tears.” He told of an immense cemetery in Teheran where our children are buried.

“In the Teheran camp I saw two boys who looked like living skeletons in tattered clothes, begging for bread. The boys took the bread which they thus received and buried it secretly in the ground, so that no one would steal it from them.”

Talks to Children Here

Bishop Gawlina expressed the hope that “out of the hearts of American children will burst forth a source of help for the wandering Polish children in Soviet Russia. Addressing American children in his broadcast he pleaded:

“You have a father and mother, but they are orphans; you have water and attractive clothes, but they are covered with rags; you have your breakfast, dinner and supper, you have bread, pie and ice cream, but they are dying of hunger; you have a warm home and a good bed, but they are sleeping in stables on the cold ground.”

“Since you American children cannot go personally to help these homeless, fatherless and motherless Polish children, please pray for them that their misery may end. Share with them the good life which God's providence gives you in the United States. Pray, I beg of you, for the Polish children that they may be released and join their countrymen.”

Sacred College Now Totals 48 Cardinals Including 2 From U.S.

VATICAN CITY (NC) — The Sacred College is now composed of 48 Cardinals, 28 of whom are Italian, four are French, three German, two American and two Spanish. The remaining nine, respectively, are Belgian, Polish, Hungarian, Portuguese, Irish, English, Syrian, Canadian and Argentine.

There are 22 Cardinals of the Curia and eight others who reside in Italy: the Patriarch of Venice and the Archbishops of Genoa, Turin, Milan, Bologna, Florence, Naples and Palermo. His Eminence Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papal Secretary of State and Cardinal Secretary of the Holy See, resides in Vatican City and seven others in edifices that enjoy extraterritoriality under the Lateran Treaty. The remainder live in private homes.

Two of the 48 Cardinals were appointed by Pope Pius XI. Cardinal Granillo Pignatelli di Belmonte, who is Dean of the Sacred College, and His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, who is ranking member of the Priest-Cardinals. The Cardinal Archbishops of Naples, Cologne, Munich and Tarragona, as well as His Eminence Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, were appointed by Pope Benedict XV. The remaining 42 were chosen by Pope Pius XI.

The oldest Cardinal is the 92-year-old Dean of the Sacred College, and the youngest is still the Patriarch of Lisbon, His Eminence Manoel Goncalves Cardinal Cerejeira.

Seven Cardinals belong to religious Orders: two Carmelites, one Jesuit, one Salesian and one Oblate of Mary Immaculate.

His Holiness Pope Pius XII has named no Cardinals. Twelve have died since he became Pontiff. Five of those who died belonged to the Roman Curia.

REMOVE BODY OF ST. JOHN BOSCO TO AIR RAID SAFETY

LONDON. The body of St. John Bosco has been removed from the Sahalan Basilica in Turin and taken to Beechi, birthplace of the Saint, to save it from possible destruction in an air raid. It was stated in a Vatican Radio broadcast heard here. The bodies of Blessed Maria Massarello and Venerable Dominic Savio also have been removed.

In a recent raid a bomb crashed through the roof of one of the chapels of the Basilica. This occurred after the bodies had been removed.

Laymen, plan now to make your week-end parish retreat at the Dominican Retreat House, Seneca Lake, Geneva.

Pacific General Gets 'Call Down' Uses Up 8 Shots To Bag Jap Sniper

WASHINGTON. — The grim business of war hasn't dulled the sense of humor of America's fighting men in the South Pacific, as has been attested by a bit of good, old-fashioned verbal Army “horse play” between Lt. Gen. Millard F. Harmon, Army commander in the South Pacific, and Maj. Gen. Joseph L. Collins, commander of a division on Guadalcanal. General Collins is a brother of Miss Agnes Collins, librarian of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, here.

General Harmon, so the story goes, heard that General Collins had bagged a Japanese sniper and sent the officer on Guadalcanal a “reprimand” for using eight rounds of 30 calibre ammunition on one Japanese. He “ordered” that in the future all major generals were limited to two rounds of ammunition, and mentioned something about damaging a coconut tree.

General Collins, in reply, blamed it all on “old age, falling eyesight and buck fever” but accounted for the eight shots as follows: 1. nicked the sniper's trigger finger; 2. tore off his cartridge belt; 3. grazed his left eyebrow; 4. splashed dirt in his face; 5. missed entirely; 6. carried away big toe on right foot; 7. removed an ear; and 8. “a silver bullet which I had carried for just such an occasion, plunked him squarely between the eyes.” General Harmon rejected the explanation as based on circumstantial evidence and said his “policy still stands.”

MENICO CITY. — The marble image of Christ which had disappeared from the Durango Cathedral has mysteriously reappeared in a hall of the Archdiocesan Office. Presumably it was returned by the person who stole it. Other valuable objects removed from the Cathedral, it is hoped, may be returned in the same manner.

labor in Germany, the French Hierarchy, in a collective pastoral letter set aside Mar. 29 as the day on which France was to be dedicated to the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

Copy of the pastoral has been received here.

“Dear brethren,” the message says, “you know that the destiny of these workers constitutes for us, your Bishops, an ever-present concern for their moral and spiritual welfare. We have spared no effort to have French priests bring them the comfort of religion and to sustain them by the charitable sharing of the lot imposed on them.”

The Bishops recommend daily prayers for these workers' intentions in all families and parishes, appeal for the setting of a good Catholic example among the workers abroad, and urge fraternal charity toward wives and mothers who are left at home alone.

Continuing the pastoral says:

“The human person, since he is a free being created in the image of God and redeemed by the blood of His Son, has rights which no earthly power may violate. No sacrifice appears to us too great when there is a question on the soul of Christian France of defending those essential liberties without which the human person could no longer conduct himself as a child of God, destined one day to return to his Creator. Otherwise there can be no safeguard for the destiny of the individual nor any assurance of the greatness and soundness of the fatherland.”

The pastoral is signed by Their Eminences Cardinals Lienart, Suhard and Gerlier.

REPORT PRIESTS HELD BY NAZIS IN HOLLAND

NEW YORK. German Nazi authorities in the Netherlands have begun a series of arrests of Catholic clergymen accused of urging their congregations to oppose the invaders' forced labor draft, according to a dispatch from the Soviet News Agency in Moscow received here by the Netherlands Information Bureau.

Twelve priests have been arrested in The Hague and five have been interned in a concentration camp at Utrecht since the Hierarchy of Holland issued a joint Pastoral assailing oppressive Nazi measures, the dispatch stated.

“To do anything of worth there is need of constancy.” — Blessed Ed. and Campier.

North Africa

In a letter to the Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco, the Rev. Patrick J. Ryan, a priest of the Archdiocese and now serving as an Army chaplain, revealed that among his duties in North Africa was aiding in the education of an Arab to cook doughnuts.

Father Ryan's letter stated "all of us have been terrifically busy with the tasks that follow every battle and it had been "only in the last week or so that we have ceased up." He revealed he had established an Enlisted Men's Service Club, complete with game room, lounge, reading and writing rooms, and free coffee and doughnuts. The club, he said, is called the best in Africa by the Red Cross. He continued:

"We have an Arab cook who does nothing but cook doughnuts every day. It was very amusing when we tried to teach him how to make them. There is no such word in French as doughnuts. We had to get an Army cook and an interpreter to get the idea across. The first lot turned out to be a complete failure, they were hard as rocks. Now he is a doughnut artist before whom no one takes precedence."

The Rev. Deak G. Moore, now serving as a chaplain with the Army in North Africa, in a letter to the Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco, made a belated report of activities at Christmas.

He told how the boys had built him a wooden platform for an altar so he would not have to use the front of his "jeep" as had been his custom. He reported when the Mass started more than 200 soldiers were kneeling about the altar and more than 400 received Holy Communion.

"The mass was furnished by a Polish boy with his accordian. As one officer said, 'There never was a time when we had so little and appreciated it so much.'"

Woo Flying School

The Rev. W. F. Connor, a priest of the Diocese of Omaha, assigned as a chaplain at the Waco Army Flying School, reported:

"Ash Wednesday evening at the other field the church was locked when I got there, and no one was able to open it. It was cold, too, but that didn't bother me, and the boys were willing, so I distributed ashes from the top step of the church in the dark. I told them that it was a real penance and they agreed with me."

Form Holy Name Unit Among U. S. Forces On Curacao Island

WILLEMSTAD, Curacao. — The initial Communion Sunday of the Holy Name Society which has been formed among the members of the American forces stationed on this Netherlands West Indies possession has just been observed.

The group was formed by the Rev. Peter Dominik Elie, O.P., pastor of the Church of Our Lady of Carmel in the Borough of Groot Kwartier, and the Rev. Augustine John Baptist van der Meer, O.P., Chief of Chaplains to the Netherlands and United Nations forces here.

The Mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Peter Innocent Verriet, O.P., Vicar Apostolic of Curacao, who also delivered a sermon praising the devout faith of American Catholics.
