Getting On In The World

PROMPTNESS

Of George Washington it was said that he never was late for an appointment and was inclined to be rather strict about this on the part of those with whom he had business.

It is not courteous to make others wait for you. It indicates, though you may not mean to have it do so, that you believe yourself so important that the other person may well wait a while for you; or that you rate the other man or his business somewhat slightly; so that it is all right to have him or his business wait for you.

On the other hand, if a person is habitually prompt, but occasionally comes a little late, it is well not to jump to conclusions or be harsh in one's judgment. There may be perfectly valid reasons for an occasional delay in keeping an appointment. In these days, riders on buses or street cars cannot always get to their destinations as soon as they wish.

So, while promptness is to be recommended and inexcusable delays to be carefully avoided, forbearance on both sides is in this as in so many other things, the best for all concerned.

With Catholic Poets

Before Confession

O Light that we have darkened,
O Friend we have betrayed,
Our candles are rekindled.
The clock again is laid:
O Spirit of Love, in your pity
Leave us not hungry, afraid!
—Sister M. Lelortie, S.N.D.

EYES

Between their opening and closing,
The night gave way to the dawn.
The night of bitter blackness,
The surging of golden skies,
My mind by calm was soothed,
As in times when a storm has gone.

By peace, whose musical hush
Is the joy of its own replica.
For eyes are signals of victory,
Or heralds of sudden loss,
In the trench where the outposts fell.

And the guns by all forsaken,
Between opening and closing of Eyes.

I had seen the form of a Cross,
Whence streamed a great light
on that road,
Which, alas, my feet had not missed.

—J. Corson Miller.

HELP US FIGHT CANCER

140,000 Americans die of cancer annually. Authorities say many of these deaths could be avoided.

Help us spread the knowledge that cancer can, in many cases, be cured. Enlist today in your local unit of the Women's Field Army.
