Getting On In The World

PROMPTESS

Of George Washington it was said that his career was like an appointment and was looked to by others as to whether they should be in the part of those with whom he had business.

It is not courteous to make others wait for you. It indicates, though you may not mean to have it do so, that you believe yourself so important that the other person may well wait a while for you; or that you rate the other man or his business somewhat slightly; so that it is all right to have him or his business wait for you.

On the other hand, if a person is habitually prompt but occasionally comes a little late, it is well not to jump to conclusions or to hunch in one's judgment. There may be perfectly valid reasons for an occasional delay in keeping an appointment. In these days, when on buses or street cars cannot always get to their destinations as soon as they wish.

So, while promptness is to be recommended and inexcusable delays to be carefully avoided, forbearance on both sides is in this as in so many other things, the best for all concerned.

With Catholic Poets

Before Confession

O Light that we have darkened,
 O World we have betrayed,
 Our candles are relit,
 The cloth again is laid:
 O Spirit of Love, in your pity
 Leave us not hungry, afraid!

—Gustav M. Lohrsta, S.S.M.

EYES

Between their opening and closing,
 The night gave way to the dawn—
 The night of utter blackness,
 The surging of golden eider:
 My mind by calm was soothed, (As in times when a storm has gone)

By peace, whose musical hush
 Is the joy of its own replies,
 For eyes are signals of victory,
 Of triumph of sudden loss,
 In the trench where the outpost fell,
 And the guns lay all forsaken,
 Between opening and closing of
 eyes,
 I had seen the form of a Cross,
 Whence streamed a great light—
 on that road
 which, alas, my feet had not known.

—J. Carson Miller.
