DIRECTOR 22 YEARS

Joseph P. MacGowan

Re-Named Legal Aid Society's President

Joseph P. MacGowan, a director since its incorporation in 1923 was re-elected President at the annual meeting of the Legal Aid Society held April 24.

Other officers elected were Mrs. Arthur Sutherland, Jr., Vice-President, Don C. Allen, Treasurer, and Henry A. Brownell, Secretary. Elected as directors for three-year terms were Mr. Alton, Jacob Gilman, Mr. Marguerite Rogers, Raines and Charles E. Rogers.

Reporting on the work of the Society for the year ending March 31, 1943, Mr. Brownell as Executive Attorney stated that a total of 3,319 cases had been handled during the year. This, he said, represented a 10% increase over the year previous and was due primarily to an influx of debtor-creditor and probate cases, which arose when mass employment for war work began and to war service cases of soldiers, sailors and their dependents. A decrease in cases involving installment contracts and marital problems was noted.

Over 240 war-service cases were handled during the year, and the number of these cases has been increasing. Mr. Brownell stated that this trend is expected to be accelerated as a result of War Department's recent designation of legal aid societies to handle servicemen's cases referred by the Legal Assistance Offices now being set up in all army garrisons, posts and stations. The number of applications referred as able to employ private counsel increased 41% over the year previous, a reflection of the improved economic condition of wage-earners.

'Women In White' For WAACs Means Bakers and Cooks School

DAYTONA BEACH, FLORIDA.—It isn't "lady in red" for the WAACs in cooks and bakers school. It's women in white. Affectionately, termed "cookies" by their associates, this group is watched with more solicitude than any other in the corps. Not in case their performance might be affected by their moods. It isn't though. Never have they been greeted with the army mess hall cry, "Pass the ammunition."

B & C school gives a six-week course in duties of mess personnel, mess management and actual cooking practice. Student cooks work side by side with graduate cooks their very first week. They study the care of refrigerators and storerooms, and the sterilization of equipment. They concentrate on menu making, the army ration, nutrition and the balanced diet.

They pore assiduously over handbooks on cutting lamb and X of, to acquire a carving technique that would be gratefully accepted at the family dinner table. There's no method of cooking meat they don't know. Variety in the menu is stressed. They learn how to roast, broil, pan broil, braise, stew and fry.

'Women In White' For WAACs Means Bakers and Cooks School

They discover how starchy foods should be cooked, how to use canned foods, how to retain vitamin content, how to prepare dried and dehydrated foods, fresh frozen fruits and vegetables. And they have the answer to the housewife's prayer—how to utilize leftovers.

Army recipes are fascinating. The teaspoon and tablespoon become instruments to stir and to taste. Recipes are based on servings of 100 and ingredients are measured in ounces and pounds. The recipes are set forth in T. M. 10-455, familiarly known as "the cook's Bible."

Cooks are herein advised to "gaug" satisfaction as evidenced by consumption or rejection of dishes offered, and urged not to incur the just resentment of the kitchen for too long a trail of uselessly soiled utensils.

Each mess hall has a mess officer, mess sergeant, dining room orderly, and cook for every 100 auxiliaries and a baker. The baker gets the extra training on the job, but is qualified for this assignment by previous experience or greater aptitude.
