World War II started with the Battle of Poland, but its final struggle will be the Battle of Peace. Already the peace-makers are proposing post-war programs. There are now in the United States 150 organizations working on post-war problems. It is estimated that publicists are beating the drum for at least fifty different peace plans.

Wendell Willkie, after flying the world in forty-nine days, jumps from a Consolidated bomber and calls for "One World." Ely Culbertson, erstwhile bridge expert, offers his World Federation Plan, which is as complicated as any of his famous bridge systems. The Federal Council of Protestant Churches in America has recently drafted its "Six Pillars of Peace Program," which is evidently imitative, but very belatedly so, of the famous Five Point Proposal or Papal Peace Program of Pius XII, first formulated in 1939. President Roosevelt's commendable World of Four Freedom commitment to hold the enthusiasm of the American public.

In spite of the conflict and confusion of the peace-makers, there is significance in the fact that men are becoming increasingly more conscious of the vital necessity of world unity and world peace. Perhaps this is God's way of preparing men's minds for the ever approaching union of all peoples in the everlasting Kingdom of Christ. Long before men thought about "One World" or the United Nations, Christ was praying: "Other sheep I have that are not of this fold. They also must I bring that there may be one flock and one shepherd."

The United Nations Food Conference at Hot Springs, Va., has concluded harmoniously, but its accomplishments were limited to such platitudinous declarations as, "All men on earth are consumers of food." The problem of feeding the hungry, like the problem of fostering the homeless, can be understood only in the light of God's Providence. The first step towards freedom from want is not scientific but spiritual.

The United Nations can find the answer to the food problems more quickly in the New Testament than at any Hot Springs Conference. Christ explained the freedom from want this way: "Seek not you what you shall eat, or what you shall drink. For all these things do the nations of the world seek. But your Father knoweth that you have need of these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his justice, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Last week the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States protested that the Roman Catholic Bishops of United States had informed the State Department that Protestant missions in the Catholic Latin-American countries were a hindrance to the "Good Neighbor" policy. The Presbyterians argue that the Catholic opposition to the Protestant missionaries in Latin-America is a violation of the principles for which free men are fighting.

The Presbyterians should recognize the fact that the right to preach Christianity in Catholic Latin-America or anywhere else is not a question of freedom but a question of authority. Before any Protestant group attempts to disrupt the Catholic world of Latin-America it must answer the question "By whose authority do you do these things?" Let the Presbyterians demonstrate that they Bishop-elect McEntegart succeeds to a See embracing all of the counties and part of two others in New York State left vacant by the death of the Most Rev. Francis J. Monaghan, fourth Bishop of Ogdensburg, Nov. 11, 1935.

When Bishop of the Ogdensburg Diocese, New York (formerly, the newly created Bishopric of Ogdensburg) in 1935, he was the youngest of a diocese. A distinguished figure in the field of social work, Bishop-elect McEntegart taught Child Welfare in the Fordham University School of Social Service and was Director of the Division of Child Care, Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York. Pope's Plea For Air Raid Victims Meant For All, Says Paper

MONTREAL (NC)—The recent plea of His Holiness, Pius XII, in the bull "Miserere Nobis" to "respect the laws of humanity in the aerial war" was addressed to all combatants, the Montreal Star, writes daily, says editorially. The Italian Radio, the newspaper says, in broadcasting the appeal sought to give the impression that the Holy Father's words were addressed to the enemies of the Axis.

"His Holiness, imbued with the same humanitarian feelings, is naturally sympathetic for the welfare of the people who may become the innocent victims of bombings," the editorial says. "We can only disagree with his intention. But we must guard against the assumption which the Italian radio makes, that because we are on the offensive and of aerial warfare now, the Pope's remarks were addressed exclusively to us."

"His Holiness is well aware of his earlier utterances along that line and we are not the guilty party. We did not have the means of Polish and French refugees, we did not devastate Rotterdam or Coventry, and we did not do not even send rain across another sea and machine gun women and children in the streets as members of the Luftwaffe do. Our targets are military targets, always, and if in the process of destroying them some innocent victims lose their lives, that is the penalty they pay in wartime for living in areas where legitimate targets exist."

"So when the Rome radio quotes the words of His Holiness, we should realize that this is but another attempt to make the world believe—what is not true—that the influence and prestige of the Vatican are against us. The Pope, as a territorial sovereign, is a neutral, as the spiritual head of a great Church and guide to millions of faithful, he stands above the squabbles of lesser men and does not render judgment upon them."
