Soldiers' Faith Edifies Pupils, Hawaii Nuns State

HONOLULU — The vigorous Catholicism of American soldiers who visit the chapel attached to their convent is a priceless aid in their work among school children and natives, it is reported by the Sisters of St. Joseph of Carondelet who teach on the Island of Maui.

The nuns also provide the soldiers with a reading room supplied with Catholic literature and facilities for writing letters home. Most of the soldiers remain for Benediction in the afternoon. The soldiers on their part have shown their gratitude to the Sisters in a number of different ways.
