Committees caring for various concessions are headed by the following Chairmen: Refreshments, Jean Kelly; Tea Room, Mrs. Leo Fleischig; Chickies Game, John Kost, Sr., Owl Cage, John Carney; League Baseball, Peter Taylor; Grab Bag, Mrs. Philip Leary; War Stamp Booth, Lorrie Hanley, Coke Booth, Mrs. John Kost; Change Booth, Fred Caldwell.

More Men Helpers are wanted for various booths and committees; report at next announced meeting if you will serve. Donations of cakes and other baked goods are requested, may be sent to rectory or to home of Mrs. Kost at 62 Baldwin Street. Donations of toys, books, novelties, for the Grab Bag, may be sent to rectory or to the home of Mrs. Leary, 612 Goodman St. N.

Tickets have been sent out—more may be had at the rectory. Returns must be in at time awards are made. Dispose of your booklet, get some more!

Monthly Parish Debt Collection this Sunday at the Postcommunion. Remember your regular monthly donation to this fund will enable us to meet bills for principal and interest. The larger the number contributing, the larger the amount of your gift, the bigger reduction we can make on the debt. Please let us hear from you on Sunday!

Holy Name Journal — next Sunday, Fr. Affleck, O.P., will be here to secure your subscription for the Holy Name Journal, official organ of the Holy Name Society in the United States. The Journal is a monthly publication filled with articles of Catholic interest, especially for members of the Parish Holy Name Society. You will be glad to hear from Fr. Affleck.

Blanket Club this week, Mrs. Florence Rector of 62 Fall Place. Congratulations to Mrs. Rector.

Tuesday Parties start at 8:30 P.M., coat you 50¢ at the door, offer you two hours of pleasant entertainment with your friends. Our hall is not air-conditioned, but is generally much cooler than the outdoors.

Parish Center St. Monica Avenue—With the coming Sunday, August 1, the new Quarter of Peace was begun. Peaceful for the Quarantine is due on this Sunday. Newcomers without jews are invited to rent a sitting room, and secure the honored position of a place among our parishioners.

The Loyalty Sundays begin August 1—Beginning with Sunday, August 1, all attendants at Mass are asked to make an addition to their Sunday Offering, to pay for improvements, repairs, decorations, in church and school, convent, rectory and hall. This plan will continue for 10 Sundays—called 10 Loyalty Sundays. Just add to your Sunday offering what you wish. Also a Sunday will mean $10 in all, this will mean $500 in 10 Sundays. May we hear from you this coming Sunday?

LARGE FAMILIES HONORED
ON ST. JEAN BAPTISTE DAY

QUEBEC — The St. Jean Baptiste Society of this city paid special tribute here on the feast of St. Jean Baptiste to the parents of large families.

While not including all the large families, 54 were selected for honor. The families were made up as follows: One of 19 children, one of 18, two of 17, six of 16, 10 of 15 children, 10 of 14, 10 of 13, two of 12 and three of 11 children. Mr. and Mrs. Adjudor Diorat, of St. Francois d'Assise parish, hold the place of honor with 19 children.

Religion Ever Comfort,
Says Woman Aged 100

CHURCH POINT, La.—(NC)—Her religion has been a strong support and comfort to her in good times and bad, said Mrs. Vermont Guidry, a devout Catholic who has just celebrated her 100th birthday. Mrs. Guidry, who was Josephine Latulippe, has been a lifelong resident of this area. Seven of her ten children are living, including an 81-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Guidry's 300 living descendants include 42 children of the fifth generation.

A HEAP OF SAND

By LAURA GRAY

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association, 8 West 46th Street, New York City. These articles are appearing weekly in our columns.

Mrs. Wheatland was a widow with such a merry smile one wondered what she had done with her sorrow, for no trace of it seemed to remain.

When I was passing her house, one morning, she was gazing at a heap of sand that builders had left inside her gate, after converting a small building into a home for her. She looked up brightly, gray hair soft about a young-old face. "I was thinking this sand would be fine for the children to play in," she said.

"I didn't know you had any children," I answered, stepping nearer.

"I haven't, but several have been coming in already. If I had a place made where they could play, this sand would give a great pleasure."

"It might attract all the youngsters in off the street."

"They'll come anyway, and if I give them plenty to do they won't get into mischief!" She smiled.

"True," I answered. This new neighbor seemed a little out of the ordinary. But no one would object if she made a hobby of entertaining the many boys and girls — especially those of pre-school age — who strayed about the neighborhood, wrecking the nerves of motorists and being a general nuisance.

I passed that way again. The sand was now enclosed in a wooden frame in a corner of the garden. Five tiny were turning out piles from tin-moulds onto a board — absolutely absorbed. A man was putting up a swing. The little woman looked up from weeding.

"Good morning," I called, slightly shocked. No one who was a widow, poor, alone, had a right to look as if the world belonged to her.

"I see you are still making improvements."

"Yes. It was a pity to waste those two posts, and the sides to a swing. I'm having a low table made for them in the shade of that tree."

"Your garden will soon be a playground."

"I used to be in charge of one,

she laughed. "That's how I know what youngsters like to do, and how good they are where they have plenty of interests."

"Don't they scrap and quarrel?"

"Not often. One night, and both are sent home. One little chap from away up the hill came and stood outside until I invited him in. I phoned his mother, knowing she'd be anxious. She came immediately. We had quite a talk."

"I'm so thankful to you, Mrs. Wheatland, for letting me know where Timmy had gone. He's always running away. We're terrified for fear he'll be run over."

"He would be welcome to play here, if only he hadn't so far to come."

"Perhaps I could bring him down now and again. These are not all your own children?"

"None are. I have none, but I like to see my little friends busy and happy."

"We thought of having a sand pile for Timmy, but were afraid sand would be tracked over the garden and we didn't want a gang of kids around the place."

The little widow ended the story with a chuckle. "To expect a wee one to remain in a garden — no matter how fine — with nothing to do, while boys and girls go laughing down the sunny street, is expecting too much. It's all right for me to have the gang — I understand little ones."

"You seem to," I smiled into her glowing face and walked on wondering. With all the gardens and pleasant homes in the neighborhood it took the only woman without children, and the poorest to provide a place where boys and girls could play with companions under sympathetic eyes.

The streets are no place for play. Children are too precious to risk exposure to traffic accidents and to undesirable influence. A place like this widow's garden should be provided for all children, and it is worth paying for."

Vatican Radio Lauds
War-Ravaged Belgians

NEW YORK (AP)—The "warm, bright and open attitude of the Belgian people" in a ravaged and desolated country was lauded last week by a Vatican radio speaker. It was reported by the OWI by the U. S. Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service.

Masses are celebrated regularly, the broadcast revealed, but often late at night and in out-of-the-way places. In "the greatly suffering country, heavily covered by snow," Namur College students, the broadcast stated, recently raised $2,000 francs for Massines "at a time when the burden of tremendous obligations lies on the country that absorbs all its wealth and heralds a universal impoverishment."
