Ecumenical Council Is Not Superior To Pope

By George C. Theinas

Several questions regarding the relationship between the Supreme Pontiffs assembled in council should be answered to imprint more clearly the authority of the Vicar of Christ.

An explanation of these corollaries, suitable to overcome arguments of those outside the Church who, through misinterpretations, follow false doctrine, and, what is worse, lead others into error.

Of primary importance is this statement: A council, even with the Pope, is not superior to a Pope alone. This is evident, for in both identical undiminished supreme authority and infallibility remain. The power of only the Roman Pontiff is complete and supreme per se and ex se; the Bishops cannot of their own right or by being united with the Holy Father in council add anything to his power.

Furthermore, a council of the Bishops without the Pope is inferior to the Holy Father, as the doctrine on the primacy teaches. The Vatican council ruled: "They stray from the right path of truth who affirm that it is lawful to appeal from the judgments of the Roman Pontiffs to an ecumenical council, as to an authority superior to the Roman Pontiff." Franzelin says that when the Pontifical See is vacant the college of the Bishops is not ecumenical, and there is no subject in which power over the entire Church can reside.

When the Pontifical See is vacant, the Church can neither define new dogmas nor pass decrees that are binding on the universal Church. She does, however, as Herve points out, retain the perennial indefectibility and Spirit of Truth promised her by Christ, and she will remain one and never swerve from traditional faith or communion with the See of Peter by falling universally into heresy or schism.

Without foundation, indeed, are those who refer to the decrees of the Council of Constance to disprove the Church's stand. The council passed the decrees proposed in the Council of Basle, and included the assertion that the council "has its power immediately from Christ, and that everyone, no matter what his state or dignity, even if it be Papal, is bound to obey it in the things that pertain to faith and the extirpation of the said (Great Western) schism" (Denzinger).

In the first place, these decrees did not adhere to conciliar law, for they were issued solely under obedience to Anti-Pope John XXIII. Inasmuch as the whole Church was not represented, they were not issued under perfect obedience. Even the council itself did not place these decrees among the decrees of faith, but only among the synodal constitutions.

As for the reactions of others, it is to be noted that Pope Martin V rejected and annulled the decrees placing a council over a Pope. St. Anthony and Turrecremata were among the learned men who impugned these decrees, and certainly the attitude of such saintly men would have been different had the decrees been given Papal sanction.

That the decrees referred only to the schism existing in that time, and, also, only to the case of the Pope of the day, who was a doubtful Pope, is evident from the affirmation of the fathers of the council themselves and from the writing of Turrecremata: "The decree of these fathers does not refer to any synod universally, but only to that particular one in whose time there was no one undoubted pastor of the Church." —The Western Catholic.

Depression never comes from God; neither does any thought which makes His service difficult. Bonds and Stamps to the fullest of his financial ability, periodical War Bond drives wouldn't be necessary. It's hard to believe that our government, now engaged in winning a war for our survival, cannot plead with its citizens to loan it the money to finance that war.
