

Send Pope Gift For China Children

DUBLIN — One hundred thousand youthful Irish mission workers have marked in characteristic manner the centenary of the Pontifical Association of the Holy Childhood. United with their spiritual directors and promoters they have sent to the Holy See through the Most Rev. John McQuaid, Archbishop of Dublin and the Association's Ecclesiastical Patron in Ireland, a message of loyalty to the Holy Father, a great spiritual banquet and a gift of $24,500 for the destitute children of China.

NATIONAL GROUPS
Los Angeles — Mexican, Filipino, Chinese and Korean Reserves were in this year's line of march that was reviewed by the Most Rev. John J. Cantwell, Archbishop of Los Angeles, when the annual procession of the Blessed Sacrament was held for the feast of the Sacred Heart under the joint auspices of the Perpetual Adoration Society and the Archdiocesan Holy Name Union.

THEY MAY KEEP YOUR CAR RUNNING

One of these girls may keep your car on the road by helping to supply synthetic rubber for new tires some day soon! Chemistry majors at the summer school of Marygrove College, Detroit, the girls, left to right, Helen Skladzien, Virginia Snyder and Helen Swicca, are learning the technique of fractional distillation by the separation of butyl and ethyl alcohols. Similar processes are used in the production of raw materials for synthetic rubber and solvents. Excellent positions await all science majors graduated. (N.C.W.C.)

130 Complete Aviation Studies Directed By Nun

WASHINGTON — (NC) — Ten weeks of intensive instruction in aeronautics, under the direction of Sister M. Aquinas, the "flying nun," were concluded August 7 at the Catholic University of America, where 130 teachers from twenty states have been attending courses in air education to equip themselves to teach classes in the schools of the nation, with the opening of the fall term.

The class room activities, which dealt with pre-flight courses in elementary and secondary school practice, were supplemented with practical knowledge gained by the student-teachers through the facilities of the Washington National Airport, which Manager John Grove made available for regular weekly classes in the various departments of the field.

The classes, counting both sessions of the Catholic University summer term, were composed of 130 teachers and fifteen others who are planning to make some phase of aviation their profession.

The courses included aircraft structure, elementary aerodynamics, principles of flying, engines, meteorology, navigation radio and communications.

Prof. Louis Crook, head of the Department of Aeronautics of the University, acquainted all the students with the nature of research being carried out at the school, and enriched the background by explanations of design, load testing and wind tunnel aerodynamic graphs, as well as provided Sister Aquinas with all the facilities of the well-equipped laboratory of the institution.

Sister Aquinas leaves early next week for her home in Ironwood, Mich., where she will continue pre-flight instruction in St. Ambrose High School, and direct publication of the curricular research of her students of Catholic University during the past ten weeks. The "flying nun" is enthusiastic over the success of her special classes at Catholic University.

"We have helped to provide air age education to an unlimited number of American youth through the instruction gained in this special course at the University," Sister Aquinas said. "Already a number of the teacher-students instructed in the first half of the course are out instructing other teacher groups so that the work is being carried on over a wide area. The enthusiasm of these teachers will match that of their students in the coming fall terms of school so that the knowledge of aviation will be carried down into the grades and thus instill in the youngsters some ideas of the world of aeronautics."

Program In Nutshell

A program in a nutshell is Nebraska Urban Farmer in this presented by the editor of The statement: Democracy cannot be superimposed from the top down. It must be established by the people from the bottom up. That the world will be reformed by a/ha/ha/ha is quite literally true. In the economic part of his reform, co-operatives are bound to play a leading part. — Social Justice Review.

ON THE HOME FRONT

From Fleur Bags and Gay Scraps
If you save muslin flour, sugar or suit bags, you will be interested in this method of putting them together to make a large size lunchbox cloth. Pieces are joined with press-open seams on the right side. The seams are then covered with bright contrasting bands of light weight cotton material as shown here.

This cloth also has a border pieced of small patterned cotton prints of all kinds and colors put together with red and blue strips. The diagram at the lower left shows how to make a pattern for these pieces which are pieced together in the same manner as an old-fashioned quilt border.

Note: This lunchbox cloth idea is from BOOK 5 of the series of home-making booklets offered with these articles. The booklet contains 32 pages of illustrated directions for making things for the home. The price of booklets is 10c plus 5c to cover post of mailing. Address: Mrs. Spears, Drawer 123, Bedford Hills, New York.
