

Alumnae Hear Bishop Stress Leadership

NEW YORK.—Leadership which combines "the leadership of principle and the leadership of the individual collectively expressed" is needed today to combat the "collectivism" of groups led by persons who are concerned only with "policy and expediency," the Most Rev. J. Francis McIntyre, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, declared at the annual Communion breakfast of the New York Circle of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

A warning that post-war education might become so materialistic and "utilitarian" that traditional Christian principles might be omitted from it, was uttered by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Philip J. Furlong, principal of Cardinal Hayes High School.

Msgr. Furlong said that education after the war might revert to the "pre-Pearl Harbor" type or a modification of it which telescoped the curriculum in a manner similar to the accelerated programs in colleges where army specialized training is given today. The third possibility he called a "revolutionary system."

"This would extend itself into the nursery, thus invading the home, and into adult life through adult education," he said, adding that although he could not define the "pre-war character" of the system it would be "materialistic and intensely utilitarian."

Easy Farewell

Maximilian I (1459-1519) pious, moral and chivalrous, was taking leave of his friends on his deathbed. When he saw them weeping he asked them:

"Why are you weeping? Because you are seeing a dying man die?" And he added: "I do not find it hard to depart. Perhaps because as emperor I clung to life with all my might, but as a man I have clung only lightly, always ready to let go in my hour of departure."

Closing the Ranks

Almost at the same time it was announced the Rev. R. E. Philbin (above), a priest of the Diocese of St. Augustine, had been commissioned as a Navy chaplain, word was received in Florida of the death of the Rev. James T. Kerr, also a priest of the Diocese of St. Augustine, who was serving as a Navy chaplain in California. Father Philbin was a Congressional page boy in Washington before studying for the priesthood. Father Kerr served with the armed forces in World War I before entering the seminary. (Florida Catholic Photos.)
