The Savior's Grandmother

The Saviour had a grandmother. She was the mother of the Blessed Virgin and her name, according to tradition, was Anne. You will not find her mentioned anywhere in the Scriptures. But she existed nevertheless, and she was the vehicle of that miracle of grace by which the Blessed Virgin was conceived free of all taint of original or actual sin.

That Saint Anne should become a popular saint is understandable. Grandmothers are usually popular people. They are indulgent to their grandchildren, perhaps more so than they should be and they are a perennial refuge from the wrath of parents. St. Anne may be a special saint of miracles for this reason, that she is indulgent to the children of her daughter, Mary, and those children include all men and women born into the world. Christ, to be sure, was the Son of Mary and from her no other child took flesh. But in Him we are all her spiritual sons and daughters. And we are all the spiritual grandchildren of her mother.

The silence of the Scriptures on the subject of St. Anne may be attributed to the retiring quality of grandmothers. They never push themselves forward. They are too old and they have had too much experience with the worthlessness of the world's applause to want to be known among men. But they do love their grandchildren. We have no doubt, in the case of the Saviour, that her love passed all understanding. But we have no doubt, too, that there is enough of it left to include those for whom the Saviour was born, lived and died. We have a strong intercessor before God in St. Anne.—(Transcript)

K. OF C. HOSTEL BURNS IN HALIFAX, SERVICEMEN OUT

HALIFAX, N. S. — Fire which broke out about 3 o'clock in the morning destroyed the Knights of Columbus hostel downtown here and caused damage which may total $100,000.

About 150 servicemen and members of the staff who were in the hostel at the time were able to get out without injury. The fire swept through the two-story frame dwelling in little more than an hour. Cause of the fire has not been determined officially but it is reported to have broken out in the cellar near the furnace.

Catholic Shelf Used In Public Library

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia. — The Catholic book shelf in the Cedar Rapids Public Library, sponsored by the Daughters of Isabella, has grown from the time of its inauguration in 1936 from 15 volumes to about 500.

A recent survey disclosed that 60 per cent of the Catholic books are in virtually continuous circulation and the average number of times each book is taken from the shelf in a year is eight and one-half.
