Rite Honors 192 Boys of Italian Descent Serving

CORNING—An honor roll carrying the names of 192 young men of Italian descent from this community who are in the armed forces of the United States was formally dedicated Saturday evening May 25 during ceremonies in the rooms of the Marconi Lodge.

Peter A. Luffred, master of ceremonies, spoke on the loyalty of the Italian-American people in this area to the Allied cause. He paid tribute to the memory of Lawrence Giesche and Frank Fabbal, Corning boys who died in service, and extended sympathy of the lodge to their families. He mentioned Lt. Angelo M. Mammone and Sgt. John DeMaggio, both of whom have been reported missing in action.

"We ask God to return them to us," he said.

Charles Lesso, scoutmaster of Troop 80, was introduced by Mr. Luffred. His boys gave the opening prayer and led the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

Others on the program were Nathan Grandi, general chairman, who explained the purpose of the meeting; Mrs. Anthony Malo and Mrs. A. F. Speciale, who unveiled the honor roll—the former having five sons and the latter six sons in the service; Myron Giambone, who sang "God Bless America" and Francis Lentricchia, who sang "St. Cecilia."

The Rev. John F. Albert, assistant pastor of St. Mary's Church, blessed the honor roll and a statue of St. Ann, presented by Mrs. Rose Fratarangelo to the lodge. Candles which burned before the statue were the gift of Arthur W. Bellby, Joseph Giardina, president of the lodge, made acknowledgment of the gifts.

Mr. Luffred made an appeal for cooperation in the clothing campaign for Italy as well as support for the Fifth War Loan drive.

Leaves for Duty as Congressman's Aide

Aerial Photographic Work Of Sgt. DeMuth Commended

CORNING—Sgt. Frederick J. DeMuth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. DeMuth, 162 Pearl St., an aerial photographer with the Ninth Air Force Bomber Station in England, was the subject of a recent communication to local newspapers in which the young man was duly praised for his splendid work.

The communication said: "When the Marauders are returning from a hell-busting raid over occupied Europe, and the big bombers come trundling up the perimeter track at this B-26 base to the dispersal area, you often see a brown, curly-head emerging from the turret to wave at the ground crew.

"Those who know the curly-haired soldier invariably say: 'That's Freddy. He's smiling. He must have got some good shots today.'"

"Freddy, is Sgt. Frederick J. DeMuth. And whether or not his photographic shots that day satisfy him, it's a sure bet that Sgt. DeMuth will be smiling. For his smile is so much a part of the Corning sergeant as is his uniform.

"DeMuth is one of the eight air force photographers at this Ninth Air Force Bomber base commanded by Col. Joe W. Kelly (Columbus, Ind.) who accompany the Marauders on their bombing missions to occupied Europe. The photomen attend the regular briefings along with pilots, navigators, bombardiers and gunners to receive detailed instructions on targets to be attacked. The photographs taken on these raids go to higher commands who get information about enemy targets and determine the extent to which the targets have been destroyed.

"The Corning sergeant enlisted in the Army Aug. 25, 1942, at Fort Niagara. After receiving basic training at Miami Beach, Fla., he attended a three months photography school at Lowry Field, Colo. He has been overseas now for nearly a year.

"Until he joined the army, DeMuth had little interest in photography, but with his army training and active service in battle zones, he has developed into a photographic craftsman of rare skill. Some of his pictures taken over occupied Europe have been widely praised. One of Marauders dropping bombs on German submarines made the front page of a famous London daily with more than a million circulation.

"For his part in the air war, Sergeant DeMuth has been awarded the Air Medal with two Oak Leaf clusters. At present he has participated in 16 missions.

"A graduate of Corning Free Academy, class of 1940, DeMuth worked as a glass inspector for the Corning Glass Co., the same firm where his father is employed as a laboratory technician."

CHICAGO—Forty-six units of materials for chaplains have been made this year by Catholic women of Will and Grandy Counties, and many already have been sent to priests serving with the Army and Navy in distant stations, it has been announced. The work was carried on through the Joliet unit of the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Women, with workers coming to Joliet each day from surrounding rural parishes.

The units contain altar cloths, corporals, amices, purificators, finger towels, palms, cinctures, cords, albs and similar materials. The work has been going on since this country's entry into the war. Money for the materials has been donated by organizations and individuals.
