

Extends Widely

Early Christmas artists sensed the unity of mankind, when they depicted the Nativity they often portrayed one of the Three Wise Men as a Negro.

They had not forgotten the good will of the first Christmas morn. They knew, as we might know, that good will knows no boundaries. It must extend to all humanity. — Alexander McQueen in Program.

MOTORCYCLING CHAPLAINS

With the Fourteenth Air Force in China—Two chaplains of the Fourteenth Air Force have solved their transportation and gasoline shortage problems by attaching to themselves a pair of oil motorcycles, complete with saddle bags for their religious texts. Aside the spots at left is Capt. John H. Albright (Catholic), of Baltimore, Md. Facing him is Capt. Charles W. Muir (Presbyterian), of Findlay, Ohio. (NCWC)

Avers Communism is 'Most Brutal Tyranny'

SANTIAGO, CHIL., Jan. 19 — Speaking "above and beyond all political contingencies" and "without minimizing" Soviet Russia's role in the war, His Excellency the Most Rev. Maurice Silyani, Papal Nuncio to Chile, warns that Communism is "an essentially materialistic, atheistic and anti-religious doctrine." He compares the way of atheistic communism to the "apocalyptic reigns of the antichrist."

"As a system and as a politico-social organization," Archbishop Silyani said in his more recent address, speaking "as a Papal Nuncio to a Catholic audience," "Communism is the most heinous aberration and most brutal tyranny that the world has ever seen. As defined by the Pope, it is intrinsically evil."

After referring to religious persecution in Soviet Russia, and noting that as far there is "no proof of its having been attenuated," he said: "Naturally the Roman Pontiff forbids all cooperation, direct or indirect, by Catholics with an intrinsically evil system."

His Excellency however sounded an optimistic note, declaring: "Russia will be converted. She too will remember God and return to her Lord just as other nations have done. And who could fail to rejoice at the return to Christ's fold of a great nation that has given us such proof of heroism in this war, and contributes on innumerable occasions to the development of moral values? Communism will disappear as a world power, just as so many other evils and evils will disappear."

Italian People Under New Administration of U. S. Relief

NEW YORK (INS) — The Italian people themselves, organized in local committees, are directing the shipping and supplies sent by this country for the relief of suffering in the devastated areas. The U. S. Relief Administration in Italy, which is being turned over to the Italian Government, is the result of a long and arduous campaign. The U. S. Holds Monopolies, Cartels Menace Peace

WASHINGTON (INS) — Advocating the policy that the "goods" which were created by God for all men should flow in an equitable manner to all, according to the principles of justice and charity, as enunciated by His Holiness Pope Pius XII, a statement of the Post War World Committee of the Catholic Association for International Peace emphasizes that the continuance of international monopolies and cartels may lead to the outbreak of another world war, despite any organizational method to prevent it.

The Committee contends that "nothing new is central and in purpose must, therefore, guide world economic agreements if the demands of the moral law are to be met." The statement points out that the "old way of handling the economic life of the earth—unrestrained competition modified by insularist protective tariff barriers—was and is wrong," but that "world-economy joined together in business cartels is worse," and "complete governmental domination of such cartels would be still worse."

Perpetual Adoration Shrine for Boston

BOSTON (INS) — A shrine of perpetual adoration will be located in the heart of Boston's Back Bay within a few weeks, according to an announcement made by the Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, Archbishop of Boston.

The shrine has been placed in the hands of the Franciscan Missionaries of Mary. The Church of St. Clement, which is being turned over to the Franciscans, formerly was a non-Catholic church and was purchased by the late Cardinal O'Connell in 1935.

Religious Freedom In Soviet Manner

(An Editorial in Catholic News, New York)

Communists in the United States as well as those in Russia have been engaged in a widespread propaganda effort to convince the people of this and other nations that there is religious freedom in the Soviet Republic.

The Religious News Service, however, in a copyrighted article from Moscow, states that Ivan V. Pelyuskiy, chairman of the Soviet Council on Affairs of Religious Cults, sees no immediate prospect for the entry of Catholic priests from abroad.

"I see no urgent need to ask Catholic priests to come from abroad to participate in religious affairs here," he said. "I am confident that Russia's own talented and hard-working clergy is capable of serving the needs of the faithful, especially as the training of new priests is already proceeding."

In all Russia we know of only one priest in communion with Rome. Father Leopold Braun of the Augustinian Fathers. He is permitted to minister to foreign Catholics in Moscow through diplomatic arrangements and under the protection of foreign embassies. How the training of Catholic priests could be "already proceeding" under such conditions apparently mystified the correspondent who asked where the training is taking place. In places like Vilna and Kaunas, "where the Russian Government is now in control," he was told. "There is a prospect of a seminary being opened in Riga also, the Soviet official said."

The only seminaries in Russia, therefore, by the admission of the chairman of the Soviet Council on Affairs of Religious Cults, are in Poland, and the only prospective one mentioned is in Latvia. There is no seminary in Russia, only one priest there, and "no immediate prospect for the entry of Catholic priests from abroad." That is the Soviet concept of religious freedom and the concept also, it appears, of Communists and their sympathizers in the United States.

Finds 65 Percent Americans Go to Church in Month

DENVER, Colo. (INS) — A survey conducted by the National Opinion Research Center of the University of Denver indicated that 65 per cent of Americans attend religious services at least once a month, and 25 per cent attend four or more times per month.

Of the remainder, 17 per cent go to church once or twice yearly, while 15 per cent never attend, or go less than once a year. Sixty-five per cent of the Protestants, 55 per cent of the Catholics, and 15 per cent of the Jews attend services at least once a month, the survey showed. Women have a better record than men, and the south a better average than other sections of the country, it was said.
