Guild Lecturer's Career As Newspaperman Colorful

Eddie Deherly, who is to lecture in Dunn Memorial on Monday evening, Feb. 6, at 8 p.m., under the sponsorship of the Blessed Martin Guild of the National Council of Catholic Women, has had an interesting career as author, lecturer and newspaperman.

He is the author of two books, "Gaul and Money" and "Splendor of Barrow," and wrote the screenplay for the motion picture, "The Five Bullets."

Born in Chicago in 1890, Eddie is the eldest of eleven children. He began his newspaper career on a copy boy with the Chicago Press, where a reporter, recognizing his talent, taught him many things about newspaper reporting, showing the importance of feature writing. Eddie was an apt pupil and soon obtained a job with the Chicago Examiner and later joined the Chicago Tribune.

While with the Tribune he was assigned the task of helping to establish a School of Journalism for Tribune reporters. He was scheduled to become a teacher in the new school but teaching was not in Eddie's line and he went to Mexico, where his investment in oil wells and did very well for a time. He worked on various newspapers in New York City and for about 15 years was a feature writer for Liberty Magazine and Hollywood correspondence for the Chicago Tribune.

At the beginning of the present war, Eddie was sent to Europe as a War Correspondent for Liberty Magazine. He spent sometime in England and France and after covering the Finnish-Russian war, returned to Chicago and became a feature writer for the Chicago Sun.

Newspaper work has always come first with Eddie Deherly but he often took his newspaper desk for short intervals and barnstormed across the country as a lecturer under the management of his wife, the former Russian-born actress, Catherine De Herly, whom he married about two years ago.

David V. Sheehan is General Chairman of the committee for the lecture and Frank O'Don is chairman of the entertainment committee. Tickets may be obtained by calling either Mr. Sheehan or Mr. O'Don.
