Ft. Loughlin Speaks At Stability Dinner

(Continued from Page 7) as the parades are brought there first. It is easy to tell the Catholic boys, he said, because in addition to their dog tags, they always wear a Rosary or Medal around their necks. If a man is brought in severely injured, he is given the last rites of the Church and the priest bears his confession. If one is brought in either dead or unconscious, conditional absolution is administered.

The speaker closed his talk with the information that we in this country should be more appreciative of the opportunity we have of hearing Mass and receiving the sacraments. Our hope, he said, are fastened to the Mother of God, that all be better Christians as a result of the hard times they have been through.

Mr. George Miller, superintendent, presented the Rev. Theodore J. Wieserich, Spiritual Advisor, of the Knights, who spoke briefly, urging the Knights to rededicate themselves to the Mother of God, that all might one day be united with her in heaven.

Mrs. John W. Brown, Rotary President, complimented the Knights on their splendid turnout and expressed her appreciation to the members of the banquet committee for their efforts in making the banquet a success.

During the dinner a music program was presented by Miss Julia Voss, violinist, and Eddie Jameson, pianist.
