Officials Overrule Protestant Objections To Crucifix in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO (NC)—The crucifix is an indestructible part of Brazil and of her people. This is the tenor of a legal opinion emphatically dismissing objections by Protestant their landscape. These signs accompanied the first explorers, and the natives reverently bowed before them. These signs... venerable witnesses of the history of this country and of this people are as closely associated with our type of life and with the subconscious nationality as the Southern Cross that has been written indelibly in the heavens of Brazil.

The opinion, written by Marcondes Filho, Secretary of Labor and Agriculture, and Secretary of Justice, was submitted to Getulio Vargas, President of Brazil, who has approved its findings. The new constitution of Brazil reflects "an attitude of understanding towards the religious belief of the majority," and recognizes religious sentiment as one of the elements of the Brazilian social system. The opinion states, adding: "The majority of the Brazilian people being of the Catholic Faith, having been attached, since their very beginning, to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, it is natural that the legal norms concerning the teaching of religion and attendance at religious services lead... to a corresponding preference of the population for the practice of the Roman Catholic Religion."

Rights of Majesty
If the image of Christ were withdrawn from a public school because it is repugnant to some of the pupils or teachers, the opinion declares, "then we should have to admit that a citizen invoking his right to reside in the city, may petition for the destruction of the statue of Christ which piety has erected as Corcovado (a peak overlooking Rio de Janeiro) and whose sight would offend his sentiments."

"The capital of Brazil is proud of its famous statue of Christ," Mr. Filho declares. "In thousands of localities crucifixes and other external signs of faith, left to them by the founders of this nation, have become an integral part of

Urges U. S. Disavow Yalta Stand on Poland

DETROIT (INS)—Three hundred Michigan delegates to the Polish American Congress have called upon Congress to disavow "these decisions of the Big Three conference in Yalta which approved the partition of Poland," as an injustice to the Polish nation. At a special meeting last Monday the group unanimously adopted a resolution stating "the fact that the Polish Government in London is the only legal and proper representative of the will of the Polish nation, recognized as such by United States and England."

Delegates demanded that Washington refuse to recognize "any puppet government imposed upon Poland by a foreign government" and regard as "Soviet any agencies of such puppet government."

A VITAL FORCE
"The Church itself provokes discussion and research... upon modern discoveries and scrutinizes the ancient treasures of knowledge." — Rev. P. Huani, S.M.

Tells of Priest Hiding Rabbi 4 Years in Belgium

NEW YORK (INS)—A Belgian Rabbi hiding refuge with his friend, a priest, hiding in the cellar of the church; being passed on to other priests who also offered shelter, enabling him to escape the wrath of the Nazis for four years until liberation came—that is the story revealed in a letter by Lieut. M. W. Popkin, made public here by the Jewish Welfare Board.

During the four years of occupation the Rabbi never ventured out on the streets during daylight. Lieutenant Popkin writes: "He never moved from his shelter unless to change hiding places when there was any sign that the Nazis might be aware of his presence. The priests brought him English French foodstuffs and after long years of hiding the Rabbi emerged with a good knowledge of English. He has returned to his congregation in Liege and is now ministering to the spiritual needs of American soldiers of Jewish faith."
