Fr. Dugan Honored By Auburn K. of C.

AUBURN — The Rev. Gregory Dugan, chaplain of Auburn Council, Knights of Columbus was honored and presented with a gift for his contribution to Columbianism, at a breakfast in Hotel Osborne given in his honor Sunday morning following Corporate Communion at St. Mary's Church.

Principal speaker was Lt. Col. John J. Miller, UNR Medical Corps, officer-in-charge of the Forerunner Unit Dispensary at Simpson Naval Training Center.

Lt. Col. Miller, holder of a Presidential Unit Citation for service with the First Marine Division on Guadalcanal, told of his experience on Guadalcanal, New Guinea and New Britain. He gave statistics revealing the vast supply and communication lines maintained by the U. S. Navy, particularly in the Pacific that bring food, ammunition, gasoline, oil and needed equipment to armed forces, enabling them to push back the enemy and making possible the might smashes now under way against the Japanese homeland.

The young naval physician who enlisted in the Navy in 1942 and was assigned to the Marines, stated that it will be a tough struggle "as the Jap is a tricky and fanatical fighter and is willing to die for a cause and on terrain to which he is more accustomed." He stated that the Americans have to fight for the recovery of Manila and other tropical islands that have had a telling effect hereafter but now are being conquered.

A question box closed the program and Commander Miller in reply to questions told of the fine spiritual atmosphere prevailing at the front and of the large turnover at Manila and other services. He told of the tremendous amount of mail handled, of its being received in many cases and of the pleasure the letter provides the men and women in the service.

Kiddies Want To Know

Especially for those mothers who get a certain comfort from knowing that other mothers of inquisitive youngsters go through the same thing and who can really relax and enjoy the wonderful variety and originality of a four-year-old's questions only when they aren't under the strain of having to supply the answers, do we quote this delightful question-and-answer interlude reported by Geraldine Donovan in Purposeful Play Magazine.

Mrs. Donovan sat down with young Michael to look at the colored pictures in his new illustrated Bible of Christ. And this is what went on, she reports, about the first picture, The Annunciation:

"Does he work there?" Michael questioned pointing to the figure of an angel standing before Our Lady who knelt in prayer.

"No," I replied. "He just came down from Heaven."

"How did he come down?"

"He flew down."

Next, "Does the angel sleep with his head under his wing?"

"He's not a cat, angel. Angels don't need to sleep because they live forever."

"Will we be angels when we get up in the sky?"

"No."

"Where is Heaven?"

"Where God lives," I replied.

"Do clouds cover up the way to Heaven?" he wanted to know, looking up into the evening sky.

"I don't know. Do You?"

"No. I'll have to ask God when we get up there."

"We don't have any meals up there, do we?" he stated confidently.

"No."

"We just live and live."

"That's right," I nodded.

"Do I have to take a nap?"

"No. You don't sleep in Heaven."

"I reassured him.

He thought it over for a bit, then burst out suddenly:

"Oh, it stops raining all day."

"And they had hot baths."
