Chaplain Kelly, Home From Pacific, Lauds Missioners

Sun-tanned and wearing campaign ribbons, Navy Chaplain Leonard Kelly arrived in Rochester last week after twenty months of service in the South Pacific with the Fourth Marine Air Wing.

Formerly a professor on the faculty of Nazareth College, Father Kelly has been a member of the Navy Chaplain's Corps since September, 1943.

Enroute home he met in San Francisco another Rochester Navy Chaplain, the Rev. William Nolan, who is on his way to the Pacific. Both chaplains are not only from the same diocese but their homes also are both in St. Augustine's parish, Rochester.

Now on a thirty day leave Father Kelly will report at the end of this month to the Oakland Navy Hospital in California. The Chaplain explained that he had requested appointment to a Navy hospital on his return to this country. The men in the hospitals need special help, he stated, "and one who has been with them over seas should be able to understand them."

Describing his life in the South Pacific Father Kelly disclosed that among the posts at which he served are American Samoa, the Gilbert Islands, and the Marshall Islands.

Chaplain Kelly expressed deep regard for the seal of the missionaries in the Pacific area and recalled a most hazardous trip which he made from Makin Island to visit the native mission on Little Makin Island.

This trip was made in a native outrigger canoe over thirty-five miles of open sea. The first American priest to visit Little Makin, Father Kelly was greeted enthusiastically by the native children who sang "God Bless America" in his honor.

Father Kelly emphasized the value and effectiveness of the
