Franklin Irlano Reserved had not yet been laid to rest before we detected the faint numblings of reactionaries who would arran the economic reforms he sponsored during the past twelve YEAR.

That must not be. Those reforms were long overdue. They were sould present to attenuate bur economic life and eliminate sacient abuse ut the rights of the common man living in a free deniocracy &

In the past we have been critical at some polithe of the Roberts Administration and we mid so in words of one extlable. The Presidents death, lamentable as it is in this critical period! dies not affer our concertion on that score.

However we do not count ourselves among those dishards who have damied Mr. Roosevelt and all his works and nomine it is a matter of record that the President gave to the notion a series of corrective measures or reforms which lifted us from depression's depths of des pair and get us on the high road to comparative rronomic stability until the war struck.

To say that his passing should atgualise the end at these reforms is sheer folly. The nation must go on despite the President's death and it cannot go on stripped of these economic mile KURTON.

The twin targets of these mactionaries are the Wagner Labor Act and the Wage and Hours LAW

These schieles of economic liberation are hated so thoroughly that even the sanction of the United States Supreme Court goes unrecognized. The Wagner Act is especially odious because it guarantees to the laboring man the right of colbective bargaining.

By book or erook, that must go, may our reactionaries. It eramps their style, it's too expensive and forces them to deal with those awful labor unions.
