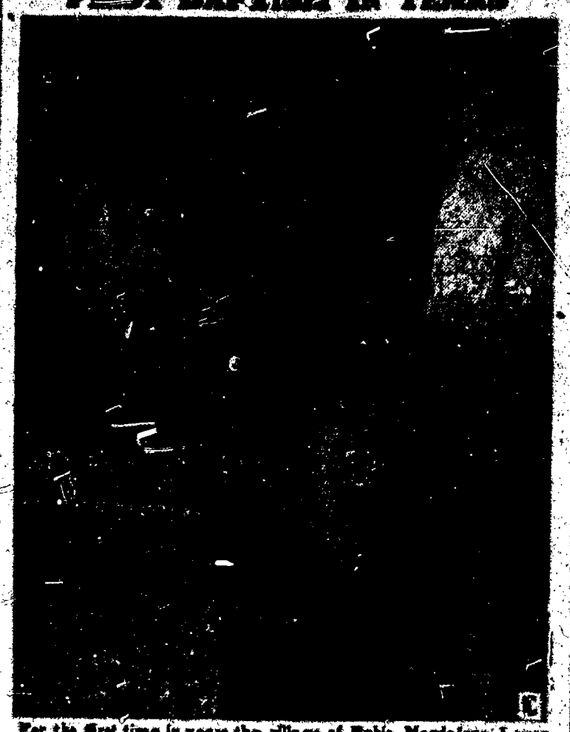
Parish Started In Plane Hangar

Chatsworth — (NC)—A surplus Army Air Forces prefabricated hangar will be converted into a combination church, school, rectory and convent for the new parish of St. Vincent Ferrer in suburban Kenwood, the Rev. Norbert Miller, administrator of the parish, has announced.

In revealing the acquisition of the hangar from an army supply center in Chicago, Father Miller pointed out that it could serve as temporary structure until the extent of the parish, due for considerable growth when homebuilding is resumed, is determined.

FIRST BAPTISM IN YEARS



For the first time in years the village of Santa Magdalena, Lower California, Mexico, enjoyed the visit of a doctor, dentist and priest when the Royal Canadian Navy's cruiser "Uganda" stopped there during her Latin American training cruise. In this photo, the ship's Catholic Chaplain, Rev. J. H. Laporte, of Montreal, is shown as he baptized two native youngsters. He was the first priest to visit the village in eleven years. Sheila Shows the Way To Chase Dating Blues

By SHEILA JOHN DALY

(Copyright 1946 The Chicago Tribune)

SING them high; sing them low; sing them loud and long. But no matter what pitch you take, you've got the blues and in a minor key at that. You feel all alone and lonely, especially along about that time on Friday nights. But you aren't the only one with troubles.

Sheila John Daly

Here are problems from young high school characters who are confused, but completely. Take a gander, gang, and maybe you won't feel so blue yourself:

"I've been going with a very wonderful fellow for about eight months, and for the last five of those eight we've been a steady pair, complete with his class ring to seal the bargain. We used to go out two or three times a week, and he'd call almost every night to talk for a while. Everything was strictly in the 'isn't love wonderful!' department.

"But about five weeks ago his cousin, a fellow a few years older than my Joe boy, returned from the navy. They were always very close, and they seem to be getting closer all the time! In fact, he's been seeing more of his cousin lately than he has been seeing of me. We now go out only once a week, and he seldom calls except to ask for a date.

"Last week, when we were out on our routine date, I asked him if there was anything wrong or if he wanted his ring back. He said that everything was still the same, and I didn't inquire further. There is no other girl in the picture either — he hasn't dated any one else at all since he started going with me. He still acts the same with me, and we still have a perfectly wonderful time when we're out together. But I'm worried about how his interest seems to be diminishing."

In the first few months of a friendship a fellow is always making the eager beaver tactics — calling a girl frequently, asking her out on a power house schedule, and being extremely attentive. He isn't sure if she is as interested in him as he is in her, so he keeps busy trying to prove how much he likes her.

But when the girl gives the friendship her okay he agreeing to wear his class ring for all to see, young Joe can begin to relax. He has his gal and he knows it; now he can settle down to enjoy her. The end comes to his mad, frantic pursuit. He still likes to see her, but if one night a week is all he can conveniently manage no one will complain. During the time he was rushing you perhaps he was paying some other fellow to baby-sit with his young brother, just so he could keep you too busy to go out with other boys.

As long as he says things are still the same and as long as you still have such marvelous times with him, there's no need to worry. He couldn't have kept up that breathless pace forever.

"I'm 17 already 18 and a senior in high school. I've never taken a girl out. It hasn't been because I didn't want to, either, but I'm a little shy about asking a gal for an actual date. I am popular enough in school and get along well with the girls in my classes. Every one seems to like me as well as any of the other fellows, in fact, recently, I was elected treasurer of our senior class. But the truth is that I'm a pretty unattractive looking fellow. I'm not exactly a Frankenstein, J. C., but I won't give Van Johnson a great deal of competition either. And so I've hesitated about asking a girl to spend the evening with me. I wouldn't like to be refused the first time I tried. . . ."

We've said it before, but apparently it can bear saying again — and again. Looks are helpful, it's true, but they certainly aren't essential to an interesting date life. If you are well scrubbed and shiny faced, well groomed and neatly put together, no gal will ask anything more. So ferret out your best bow tie and get ready for a big date with your favorite gal next Friday night. You won't have any trouble at all. All those grotes for treasurer didn't come from your fellow friends you know!

Auxiliary of Hospital Sec, Sixty Years a Priest

London — (NC) — Bishop William F. Brown, Auxiliary of Southwark, which covers the south-east corner of England, including London, south of the River Thames, celebrated the 60th anniversary of his ordination on March 20. Bishop Brown is 83 and still very active. He is two years older than Archbishop Peter E. Amigo of Southwark.

These two prelates guide Britain's "Hell Fire Corner" diocese, which bore the brunt of German bomber, V-1, and V-2 assaults on Britain. It is the most war-damaged diocese in the country.

THE CHILDREN OF GERMANY APPEAL TO YOU!

Thousands of helpless children in Germany are slowly reaching the starvation point. They are hungry, they are cold, they are ill. Many of them have no homes. They are living from hand to mouth, among the ruins and rubble. They are eking out an existence so bare that we, in this land of plenty, cannot imagine its privations. Misery, disease and want are their unfortunate lot.

Now, their meager reserves of food and bodily strength are exhausted. Their food rations have been cut far below the danger line.

WILL YOU HELP THEM?

Their grave need cries out for Christian Charity. Their helplessness demands that we, as fellow human beings, be humane.

War Relief Services-National Catholic Welfare Conference asks you to participate in this tremendous gesture of Charity to the German people.

Without your help they cannot survive. Without your contributions, millions of children, the aged and infirm may die.
