FRENCH PRIESTS IN U. S.

Disparaged by the Cardinal, Archbishops and Bishops of France to study the set-up of Catholic organizations in the United States, three priests from Paris visit the headquarters of the National Catholic Welfare Conference in Washington. Their itinerary also includes New York, Chicago, Boston, Quebec and Montreal. Accompanied by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Howard J. Carroll, General Secretary of the N.C.W.C., they are, left to right: Rev. Adolphe Rabot, S.M., Vicar Delegate of U. S. Armed Forces in Western Europe; Rev. Rene Steirman, Assistant Secretary General, Catholic Action in France; Rev. Jean Woodin, Chief of French Army Chaplains. (By N.C. Staff)

State Aid Asked for Non-Public Schools

Children and parents who need help to get the minimum of education for an American child in the schools of their conscientious choice.

"It is a matter of very sincere regret that the proponents of these bills could not or would not understand that our government must be just to all citizens and to all parents, especially poor parents, regardless of creed or color or blood, who are striving to educate their children and to rear them as good Americans."

A bill which proposes Federal aid to non-public as well as to public schools has been introduced into Congress, the Archbishop said, adding that support of the bill by the American Federation of Labor is in harmony with true American tradition. The Archbishop pointed to the G. I. Bill of Rights as a "pattern which will grant aid equitably where it is needed."

Touching on "the vexing problem of sectarianism in education," Archbishop McNicholas stated that "the multiplying of laws which forbids public support of any school teaching sectarian doctrines was a political solution." "It must not be considered an American tradition," he said. "Rather, we should regard it as an historical expediency. We are certain that the complete secularization of American public education, as we know it today, was not the intention of those who tried to solve the sectarian problem of education in our schools."

To promote greater respect for religion and for moral principles in our public schools Archbishop McNicholas made the following proposals:

- (1) Elimination from curricula and textbooks of any material prejudicial to religion;
- (2) Incorporation in the curricula of materials inspiring children to religion;
- (3) Cooperation of school officials to permit churches to impart formal religious instruction during school hours; and
- (4) Introduction of moral training in public schools.

For the "widespread delinquency of our youth" the Archbishop blamed the fact "that God is shut out of our tax-supported schools, that moral principles and moral training have no part in this school system." "Many schools will permit teachers and professors to speak against God and against religion," he said. "That is supposed to be liberty of education. The same schools will not permit statements in favor of God, nor the exposition of basic moral principles; that is supposed to be narrow sectarianism."

Leave Spain Work Out Own Destiny Says Expert

Using the well-being of the Church with any given political regime and such too with any given political figure. But this is not this has long since passed. We are asked today, now, in the spring of 1943, to believe that Franco Spain is a direct and immediate threat to the peace of the world. And in asking us to believe this, we are virtually being asked to take leave of our sanity.

Whatever grave defects the Franco government may have—and it has many—whatever spots of omission and commission it may have done in the past—and they may be numerous—the real question is a very simple one. Will action now by the United Nations contribute one iota to the peace of the world?

There is a time for action and the time has come. It is a moment when vigorous action may properly be conducive to good and honorable results. There are other times when such action may very well precipitate a state of affairs that can easily be avoided. It must be clear to any one not overwhelmed by political passion, that to break off relations with General Franco will almost certainly not lead either to his downfall or to the removal of what some of our people enjoy calling "the last bulwark of fascism in the world."

No Invasion Seen

No one has yet presented a convincing case that Spain is a threat to any other country now. No one in his right mind believes honestly that in 1943 General Franco is planning on the invasion of France when he remains from doing so in 1940 when it would have been done with impunity and almost certain success.

The subject of thought that at times this argument of the Franco regime gives it credit for an extremely small amount of success. Spain's government may be as bad as it has been painted. It may be stupid, inefficient, intolerant and inept. But if it does not maintain the peace and security of its neighbors or of the world, there is clearly no conceivable basis for hostile action against it.

Moreover, there is a childlike idea abroad in our land that assumes that an excellent weapon for combating regimes we do not like is to withdraw diplomatic relations. It is high time that our people understand that the maintenance of diplomatic relations has nothing to do with approval or disapproval of a regime as such. We recognized the Soviet Union in 1933 and Nazi Germany in the same year simply because they were the governments of their respective countries.

We refused to sever diplomatic ties with Vichy France as long as that constituted an established government. If for no other reason than to have an excellent listening post, we should not be hurried away by a ridiculous emotionalism that pretends to chastise governments we do not like by bringing our ambassadors home.

In addition to the fundamental

Spain Foothold Seen Aim of Reds

to narrow itself down to aim of forcing a crisis, even should, in Spain, with the thought that a communist regime would be installed there. And it looks like the only way this can be done is for outside nations to intervene in the internal affairs of Spain.

Latin-American Reaction

And that raises a consideration which extends to this continent. What will be the reaction of Latin-American countries if they believe the Big Powers wish to install in a manner of speaking and schematically in the internal affairs of that country, thus giving rise to a communist government there? The argument that the Big Powers want to hunt down totalitarianism won't do. At least not while Russia is the kind of "democracy" it is.

No, that isn't likely to fool the countries of Latin America and the Caribbean. They have been "intervened" before and they know what it's like. If "intervention" starts again, they can well argue, who knows what day, or hour, it will start again with them? So, Latin America, as well as the real democracies of Europe, watch with a great deal more interest than some Americans can understand, the course the Spanish question will take in the United Nations.

The United Nations, incidentally, will be a threat to us, as it is to the rest of the world, as a potential threat, to world peace. There are few who believe there is any worthwhile cause one can take against Spain as far as its external affairs now are concerned. That would seem to indicate that there will have to be an intervention in its internal affairs, if anything is going to be done. That means that the Big Powers—and particularly those of Latin America—are going to become apprehensive. Mr. Lawrence says said democracies "make up the backbone of the United Nations." The so-called smaller countries are some of our best democracies.

Franch with Trotsky

That brings us back to the starting point. From almost every angle, it looks like the French demand regarding Spain is fraught with trouble. The purpose seems to be to get Franco (totalitarianism) out. Without debating the merits of Franco, it might properly be asked what will Spain gain, because most observers are convinced that a communist regime with its totalitarianism will be installed in power. Such an eventuality is almost certain to multiply the confusion existing in Europe. The means through which it will have been effected—intervention in Spain's domestic affairs—will be the cause for profound apprehension in this hemisphere.

What, then, do those people seek who so blatantly call for Poland (really Russia) to prevail over Great Britain and the United States in this issue? Don't tell us they're seeking to root out totalitarianism.

Cistercians Start Work On Abbey

In a simple ceremony Abbot Albert Boston, O.C.S.O. of New Melleray Abbey near here, broke ground for the construction of an addition to the famous Cistercian monastery which was founded in 1248. When completed the new and old buildings will form a quadrangle, the traditional shape for Trappist monasteries.

The work of the community, now numbering 60, has swartaxed the present facilities and the new building will provide facilities for 100 monks. The project is expected to be completed in time for the celebration of the monastery's centennial in 1948.

The construction will be done by the monks themselves. Sandstone will be dug from the monastery quarries. The monks will lay the foundation and also dress their own lumber from trees felled on the monastery farm.

The members of the Trappist Order, which takes its name from La Trappe Monastery in France, are devoted to the contemplative life and follow the Rule of St. Benedict. The Monday, which begins at two o'clock in the morning, is taken up with prayer, reading, studying, meditating and manual labor. The Religious maintain a perpetual silence, speaking to each other only when absolutely necessary.

Papal Legate Named For Fatima Ceremony

Vatican City (NC) - His Eminence, Benedetto Cardinal Aloisi Masella, former Apostolic Nuncio to Brazil, has been appointed by His Holiness Pope Pius XII to serve as Papal Legate on the occasion of the crowning of the Statue of Our Lady of Fatima at the world-famous Portuguese shrine on May 12.

On Guard!

Reporter Randolph generously withheld the name of the radio singer "who chose the steps of St. Patrick's as a photographic background for herself and her cocker spaniel, BOBIE" wearing fashionable hats.

And speaking of this, the New York Times states that "it is now traditionally part of the parade to dress up dogs." We can not appreciate the thinking of American women who would waste money on Easter hats for dogs and parade with them on the sacred hour of the anniversary of the Risen Christ. Understand, we like dogs, but we agree with Chesterton who said, "I like a dog provided you don't spell the word backwards."

If this nation ever collapses, future historians may find the key to the breakup not in the records of Congress but in the story of stylish women parading with pink-ribboned dogs before a church on Easter morning.

2 War Criminals Said Converted

Independent (RNS) - Many of Hungary's war criminals have been converted to Catholicism shortly before execution, according to reports here. Two of the most prominent personalities were those of Baron Salfer, former Foreign Minister under the Horthy regime, and a member of an old Unitarian family, and
