Simple To Travel

By Rev. Richard Glendon
 How simple it is to travel to any town across the land! Simply make sure that you get on the right train and that you stay on it. Obey the simple rules of the road. That's all. You're sure to get there. You're sure to get there. You're sure to get there.

Father Gillis Says:

Perhaps the most familiar epithet attached to the Catholic Church is "medieval." It means of course that we are behind the times. We are backward in the 19th century, or at least the more progressive part of the world, passed us by and it has been getting further ahead of us ever since. Our ideas of education in particular are antiquated. We know nothing of modern thought, modern science, modern pedagogy. We are simply out of the running. I have heard of an educational institution in which the exponent of "progress" referred to a Catholic school as "that medieval establishment across the street." They may have thought it a condemnation not to call us prehistoric or antiquated.

Catching Up With Us Catholics

If it gets in at all. We cannot get on that way. If I didn't know that Dr. Fiedler does his own thinking and needs no guiding thoughts or words from any man I would swear that he had lifted that passage out of some Catholic paper or that he had some agent to Man to get down the words of the priest. All of us who write or speak have been composing upon that theme and repeating that refrain for these many years. Dr. Fiedler's words were speaking in the wilderness, a vast wilderness where the voice went off to the far horizon and where there was not so much as an echo, not to say a human being to catch and repeat our words. But now it appears that someone was listening, or if not listening, thinking along the same lines.

I Am An American

By DAN PATRICK
 Labor in the United States has few more ardent champions than the Catholic clergy. It is, therefore, a matter of deep regret when misguided, laboring men, decked out as pickets, march through a place of public assembly at the very moment a priest intones a prayer.

Washington

The Southern Frontier
 By TOM ROGERS
 Washington — At the moment we are quietly experimenting a revolution that will change the entire economy of the nation. It is a twenty year affair, but since it is complete the political structure of this nation will be radically changed. The far, it has not been cited in the daily press. But it is coming with a speed and a power that is many long-term economists and sociologists in nothing short of breathtaking. It is the great revolution of the present century.

Rochester's Crisis

Great effect of Rochester would like to see an equitable distribution of the national income. The Rochester crisis is not a crisis of the city, but a crisis of the nation. The Rochester crisis is not a crisis of the city, but a crisis of the nation. The Rochester crisis is not a crisis of the city, but a crisis of the nation.

Christ Makes His Mark Again

Christ makes his mark again in the lives of the people. He makes his mark on the hearts of the faithful, and he makes his mark on the world. He makes his mark on the hearts of the faithful, and he makes his mark on the world. He makes his mark on the hearts of the faithful, and he makes his mark on the world.

Mustings of a Scout

By MARION C. McMULLIN
 "What should be our attitude towards this?" asked Magr. Fulton J. Sloan in a recent broadcast. He was not to explain. There are two ways of looking at it: one is to see it without purpose, the other is to see it with purpose. The way we will react to it depends entirely on our philosophy of life. As the poet has put it: "Two men looked through their prison bars; one saw mud, the other stars."

Hitlers in Sheets

THOMAS L. STOKES
 Again the Ku Klux Klan is burning crosses on Stone Mountain near Atlanta, Ga. How out of character! What a desecration! Stone Mountain is a bar and a shrine, the center of a fraternal insurance society. A strange man by the name of William Joseph Simmons was its first founder, its first wizard. It went along for a time without attracting much notice or many members.

Secret to Happiness

An aid Bishop of the Church in Italy, who had borne many trials without complaining and who always kept a cheerful smile in the face of all adversities was once asked the secret of his being always happy. The good Bishop replied, "It consists of a single thing, and that is, making the right use of my eyes."
