Cemetery Mass Held in Auburn

Suffering Army. At the present time our Army is considered the Army Triumphant. But Father Lynch and many many of his fellow soldiers are no longer at the front. They are in the cemeteries of Europe. We look about this beautiful cemetery and see the many flags denoting the graves of veterans we can not help but think of the thousands of similar graves that can be found wherever our boys fought. I have seen many of these graves in the South and Western Pacific. It is the aim of our government that these graves be beautiful. They are. She desires that each grave be kept nicely. They are. It is my belief that these graves should be left as they are. I believe that if we could see those who lie there, they would tell us that they prefer to be with their loved ones and that they are happy in their graves. We should not bury their bodies in the earth. We should bury them in the hearts of their loved ones. Only the trumpet on the last Day should summon these bodies from their graves. We earnestly pray that their graves have not been shed in a vain cause.

The large choir was directed by Rev. Edward K. Ball, organist and choir director of St. Mary's Church.

300 AT FIRST CEMETERY MASS IN PENN YAN

Penn Yan — The first Field Mass in the almost 100-year history of St. Michael's Church here was celebrated in St. Michael's Cemetery on Memorial Day morning by the Rev. Hubert A. Binky.

As the day was also the Feast of the Ascension the white Mass vestments were used. Approximately 300 persons assisted in the outdoor services.

In the sermon, the Rev. Thomas C. Kane touched on the three phases of the Holy Mass offered on that day, the Feast of the Ascension, a Holy Day of Obligation; the faithful departed of the parish whose last resting place formed the background for the Mass; and the veteran dead, many of whom he pointed out, not too many years ago had served as altar boys in St. Michael's.

Altar boys for the field Mass were Roger Lamplier and Joseph Lott.

DE SALES PLAY WINS ACCLAIM

Geneva — Adding to their laurels in the field of drama, De Sales High School students scored another victory on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 22 and 23, in the presentation of their annual Senior play, "Lily of the Party," a new comedy by Marjorie and Joseph Hays.

Remarkable teamwork marked the performance from start to finish making for a closely welded unit which carried the action of the play to a brilliant climax. There were a number of amusing situations and clever witticisms, shot through with a vein of satire.

John Pater was in charge of the De Sales High School band. Numbers were sung by De Sales Glee Club.

Rev. Raymond P. Nolan, principal of De Sales High School, was director of the play.
